PICCADILLY GOES TO CITY COUNCIL MAY 3...PAGE 4

Bay Day circus coming April 30

BAY SCHOOL students and parents braved wind and rain to march in a parade up Ocean Avenue last Saturday (photo below). The colorful parade was organized to publicize the upcoming annual "Barnum and Bay Day Frontier Circus," which will be presented from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday April 30 at the school on the west side of Highway 1 about a mile south of Rio Road. The fund raising event will include games, baked goodies, a circus, costumes, pony rides, prizes and crafts. Visitors are welcome and are invited to attend in costume. In the upper left photo, Kerry Tescher showed that she was ready for the rain with her umbrella and galoshes and at upper right, clown Casey Lee stopped to smell a rose during the parade. Would legal second kitchens threaten Carmel?

By MICHAEL GARDNER

A PLAN to legalize large numbers of "second kitchens" and "granny houses" may destroy the residential character of the city, Carmel City Councilman David Maradei believes.

City officials have spent the past six months discussing a proposed ordinance to revise the residential zones, which include provisions to legalize second kitchens and granny houses.

The council unanimously gave preliminary approval on first reading of the proposed revisions at a continued public hearing April 11.

But Maradei apparently has changed his mind and plans to protest legalization of the low-cost units during a second reading of the ordinance at 7:30 p.m. May 3 at city hall.

"As a councilman, I've spoken with many of the leading citizens of the community who are concerned about low-cost housing and granny housing and the impact that mandated housing will have on our R-1 (residential) zones," Maradei told the Pine Cone/Outlook April 25.

"The concern is centering around an intensification of the use of the land within the city and the question whether the city is able to support that intensification without an adverse effect on the residential character of the community," he continued.

Maradei is concerned that the small lots in Carmel cannot handle a proliferation of second kitchens and granny houses.

"Personally, I'm going to ask the council to take a really hard look at the type of development we're suggesting," Maradei said.

In addition, Maradei pointed out that the

CVPOA clarifies

Dear Editor:

In response to "Controversy flares in CVPOA over lawsuit to halt resort lodge" in the April 21 edition, what the article refers to as a "letter to fellow board members" should have more accurately been referred to as a draft sent to other board members for their comment. I had made this quite clear to Joe Livernois a week earlier and suggested that the Pine Cone at least wait until the letter was in its final form before using it in an article.

The Carmel Valley Property Owners Association board would have polled its members on whether to proceed with the suit against Monterey County and the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District if that had been feasible. To do so, or to have announced the suit ahead of time, however, would have been to take a serious risk that we might compromise the effectiveness of the suit.

The CVPOA board would not have been acting in a responsible manner, therefore, had it done so. The decision to have the firm of Shute, Mihaly and Weinberger investigate the merits of a possible suit was made at a monthly board meeting attended by the public, the press and a representative of the Board of Supervisors.

At a later board meeting at which the public, the press and a representative of the county were also present, the board decided publicly to make a decision about the suit in the near future. Had there been broad opposition to the suit, it probably would have become apparent then.

The officers and directors of the CVPOA were all elected within the last year and a half by the association's members. We presume we were elected because we represent the views of most of them. Historically, certainly, CVPOA's membership has been supportive of the kind of thinking that led the board to approve the suit.

The fact that the CVPOA has not turned to the courts before now, we feel, shows its restraint and demonstrates that, contrary to the implication in the April 21 article, the association is not a litigious organization. The CVPOA has resorted to the courts only after having attempted to exhaust every administrative remedy first.

The CVPOA did not consider a lawsuit at the time the amended specific plan was initially approved in 1976 because the problems addressed in the current lawsuit did not appear to exist. It was understood that a moratorium on major water service area extensions was in effect. The same one that is in effect today.

The supervisors had assured Carmel Valley residents that the Carmel Valley ranch had no choice but to gets its water from an aquifer other than the Carmel River aquifer. That other aquifer is commonly referred to as the "Tularcitos" aquifer, although the Carmel Valley Ranch has never made any serious attempt to prove its existence. The approved amended specific plan was also understood to state the same thing.

It is only recently that the county and water management district decided for the first time to allow the extension of the Cal-Am service area on a large scale. The CVPOA, in an attempt to reverse this, has exhausted all administrative remedies including appealing to the Public Utilities Commission. The PUC has granted a public hearing at a time yet to be determined, but the CVPOA had to file its lawsuit simultaneously because of the time limitations established by state law.

When the Carmel Valley Ranch Specific Plan was originally approved during the mid-1970s, its environmental impact report was current then. That plan is now eight years old and outdated.

In addition, it is only recently that the CVPOA and others became aware for the first time that the county and water management district have been violating the California Environmental Quality Act.

The CVPOA has turned to the courts as a last resort and has waited to do so until the last possible moment.

The question of private property rights being paramount over other rights is one that has been and will be argued for a long time. Historically, it has not been the CVPOA position that private property rights are more important than other rights including a decent quality of life. It is equally arguable that deprivation of the property rights of a corporation is a moral issue.

It has always been the intention of the CVPOA Board to seek public financial support. No organization of citizens such as the CVPOA could ever expect to bear the financial burden of a legal suit unless it received public support. The financial backing of local residents will be one indication of the community's support. Since the case is such a strong one, the CVPOA hopes that the court will see fit to recompense the CVPOA for its costs in bringing the suit.

The problems created by the Carmel Valley Ranch development have been a major concern of the CVPOA for almost a decade now, and date back to a time prior to the granting of the specific plan. It was only after a great deal of deliberation that the board of the CVPOA took the major and serious step of entering into this suit.

The board did so, I believe, with the knowledge that it was acting in the best traditions of the American political process in using the system of checks and balances established by the Constitution. The Board believes that the majority of the CVPOA's members does not approve of the actions of our elected officials and, along with the city of Carmel and the Carmel Area Coalition, the CVPOA is taking those officials to court.

Carmel Area LCP

Dear Editor:

In the April 21 issue of the Pine Cone you have reported that the (Coastal) "...commission tossed aside Monterey County's request not to allow public access to beaches at Yankee Point and Malpas Creek," giving the impression that the beaches are now public. This is incorrect reporting.

The Carmel Area Local Coastal Program was approved with the exception of four lots above Malpaso Creek and six lots adjacent to Yankee Point Beach. These 10 lots have been left out of the LCP altogether at this time and will be dealt with as another issue.

Human behavior disgusts

Dear Editor:

Too bad that the visitors from Santa Clara felt that their visit to the beach in Carmel had been ruined because of dogs and their litter. The dogs don't bother us, and the owners seem to be a responsible lot. It is the behavior of human beings that disgusts us — bottles and cans piled everywhere, no doubt by tourists who have come to enjoy the unspoiled beauty of the beach. At least the dogs' litter decomposes.

Some similar problems

Dear Editor:

While reading the Country Life section of the March 23 issue of Punch, it would seem the villages of England have many of the same problems as Carmel. To wit: "The trees and bushes in Great Bromley and Frating will soon be painted blue, if parish councillors get their way.

"Frating Parish Council wants to see the countryside blend in with a 12,000 sq. ft. commercial vehicle workshop which has been painted bright blue." (Essex County Standard.)

"A meeting of Hertsmere Council's district plan sub-committee decided not to accept the petition against plans to build houses on an allotment site on Chauncy Avenue, because the petition was one-sided." (Potters Bar Press.)

"They gave the go-ahead this week to take a positive lead in felling and treating all dead elms seriously affected by the disease on their own property and to take steps to ensure that owners of dead or dying trees also be felled and destroyed." (Musselburgh News.)

Decision makers should take into account needs of poor

By ROBERT MISKIMON

TO SOME Carmelites, the news that there is real poverty, as measured by census statistics, in the village may come as a shock. And yet, according to the 1980 census, 8 percent of the 4,707 residents of Carmel are below the federal poverty level.

While that figure, which represents 361 Carmel residents, is not quite as high as the statewide average of 11.4 percent of Californians in poverty, it is significant enough that it should be taken into serious account by public decision-makers — particularly the Carmel City Council.

More statistics recently released by the Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments indicate that 41.3 percent of all Carmel households were classified as "low income," which represents 777 households.

These figures, while they do not take into account certain forms of income such as Social Security and pensions, are based on actual household size in Carmel of 1.83 persons, not the four-person household as assumed by the city's well-paid consulting firm which wrote revisions to the 1973 general plan now under review by city officials.

So even if the percentages of poor and low income persons in Carmel are discounted by an unknown factor, because of the fact they do not reflect some forms of income, no one can draw the conclusion that there are no Carmel residents in need of the kinds of services associated with poor people.

These include, but are not limited to, affordable housing and convenient transportation — two needs most commonly emphasized by those who deal most closely with human services.

While it is admirable that the Carmel City Council wants and is willing to commit city funds for more parks in the downtown commercial area, such as the Piccadilly Park, and is willing to lend financial support to Harrison Memorial Library, it should not forget that there are some other — more basic — needs that have yet to be addressed.

A committee has been formed to investigate alternatives for the construction of senior citizen housing on two city-owned lots on Dolores Street between Fourth and Fifth avenues. Let's hope that some type of concrete proposal with an agency such as the Carmel Foundation is forthcoming, and is launched by the council.

A proposal for a city mini-bus system, which the council investigated several years ago, may still be a possibility as one way to fill the gap in transportation services for the elderly and needy in Carmel. Here's hoping some progressive-minded members of the council assign as high a priority to this type of project as to the library annex, construction of Piccadilly Park, or the disposition of the Flanders Estate.

Part of the Carmel mentality for many decades has been a sense of uniqueness and insularity. To some extent, this attitude has been successful and justified: Carmel is a special kind of place.

But at the same time, that attitude has brought along with it an almost otherwordly perception that Carmel isn't prone to the kinds of gritty problems faced by other communities. That attitude has often — and unfortunately — blinded many Carmelites and city officials to the real human needs that exist.

Maybe the city council should solicit the opinions and involvement of Carmelites and professionals in the health, welfare and social services fields about what kinds of services are needed by poor and low income persons, in a special public hearing before it adopts the revised general plan, which is to guide the city for the next 20 years or so.

If city decision makers take into full account the social needs of less fortunate members of the community, they will have proven that Carmel is indeed a special place — and for more reasons than magnificent scenery and a bohemian village character.

Dependent on dope?

Dear Editor:

A recent report gives us plenty of reason to wonder if the American economy isn't hooked on dope. It is alarming to realize that the annual sale of narcotics in America is now an estimated $100 billion per year cash business.

As we hope that the recession comes to an end, an alarming question remains unanswered: what would the economy do without the tremendous amount of money that circulates as the result of narcotic sales?

How dependent is the economy on the sales of dope?

Should law enforcement suddenly stamp out this evil traffic, could the American economy survive the withdrawal pains?

Business leader says general plan changes could hurt local firms

By MICHAEL GARDNER

PROPOSED REVISIONS in the Carmel General Plan could force many merchants out of business, open the city to lawsuits and generally create more problems than they would solve.

That is the opinion of Carmel Business Association President George Greenwood, who provided the Pine Cone/Outlook with a copy of his remarks before a public hearing on the proposed general plan revisions April 27.

The planning commission was expected to review revisions in the housing, circulation and land use elements of the general plan.

If planners failed to complete the public hearing last night, another session was expected to be scheduled. The meeting was held after press deadline.

The Carmel Business Association plans to conduct a questionnaire of city merchants to gather more information and comments before the city council conducts public hearings in early summer.

'If such an ordinance as contemplated was successfully enacted and enforced, we believe it would cause a very considerable number of businesses to fail, including those thought most desirable in this community,' he said.

The CBA will discuss the distribution of the questionnaire and its position on the general plan revisions when it meets at 8 a.m. May 5 at La Playa Hotel. The meeting is open to the public.

The business community is mostly concerned about the circulation element, which includes proposed revisions to severely restrict employer/employee parking and double parking by trucks making deliveries, Greenwood pointed out.

A revision to restrict truck delivery parking before 10 a.m. is proposed to help relieve downtown congestion.

However, if the policy is established in the general plan, many merchants would be forced out of business because trucks would refuse to make deliveries, said Greenwood, who is manager of the Wells Fargo Bank branch in Carmel.

"If such an ordinance as contemplated was successfully enacted and enforced, we believe it would cause a very considerable number of businesses to fail, including those thought most desirable in this community," he said.

"Many delivery trucks would boycott Carmel-by-the-Sea. The delivery routes taken by the carrier often starts in points such as San Francisco, San Jose and Los Angeles, to name a few," he said.

"It is highly unlikely that those shippers would or could change such extended routes so as to accommodate local merchants."

•

AN ORDINANCE to restrict truck delivery double parking to certain times may also be illegal, Greenwood believes.

"We feel that such an ordinance would be, in practice, unenforceable if not illegal and we would invite the city attorney's opinion on its legality.

"In our opinion, even the consideration of such an ordinance would involve the city in extensive and expensive litigation not only from individual businesses, but by shippers and unions, such as the Teamsters."

Greenwood said the city and business community needs to sit down together to develop solutions to all of the parking problems in Carmel.

"We recognize the traffic and esthetic problems caused by double parking of delivery trucks and would like to see some practical means developed to eliminate or largely mitigate this problem," he said.

"We think that some sound approach to its solution can be arrived at in conjunction with the solution to the automobile parking problem."

The proposed revisions recommend that the city prohibit employee/employer parking downtown.

In addition, a resident-sticker program is recommended to stop employee/employer and tourist parking in the residential zones of the city.

These proposals will cause more problems instead of solving the parking dilemma, Greenwood stressed.

"We would be intensely opposed to eliminating employer/employee parking without, and until, provisions are made for alternative parking," he said. "If such provisions are made, we feel that the business community would support severe restrictions of on-street parking."

The proposed revisions state that more parking restrictions would promote increased use of public transportation.

The thinking is false, Greenwood pointed out.

"The intention to promote the use of public transportation, we note, does not take into account the realities of existing public transportation facilities," he said.

Greenwood said only three buses leave a main terminal in Monterey early enough to arrive in Carmel by 9 a.m. With a capacity of 40 people per bus, that would only accommodate 120 workers.

"This is only a small fraction of the supposed 2,000 or more people who come to work in Carmel," he said. "The proposition that public transportation can solve the problem is an illusion."

•

THE BUSES also do not adequately serve Carmel workers who live in Seaside, Pacific Grove or Marina, he said.

And many people need their cars to drop the kids off at a day care center or school. There are also employees who use their cars on the job, Greenwood said.

"We entrust you to consider the human sacrifice involved in eliminating employee parking without providing alternative parking," Greenwood said.

"Untold suffering and inconvenience would be imposed on human beings who are innocently trying to eke out a living to provide for themselves and those who depend on them and who, it must be remembered, had absolutely nothing to do with creating any problem which exists in this matter."

Greenwood also questions the legality of prohibiting employee/employer parking on public streets, which are paid for out of taxpayers' pockets.

City employees are also guilty of adding to the parking problem, Greenwood pointed out.

"We recognize and appreciate the problems presented by the large number of autos brought into town by employees," he said.

"It must be remembered, however, that these include employees of the fire department, police department, library, post office, Red Cross, churches, businesses considered 'desirable,' Sunset Center and the city itself."

'This is only a small fraction of the supposed 2,000 or more people who come to work in Carmel,' he said. 'The proposition that public transportation can solve the problem is an illusion.'

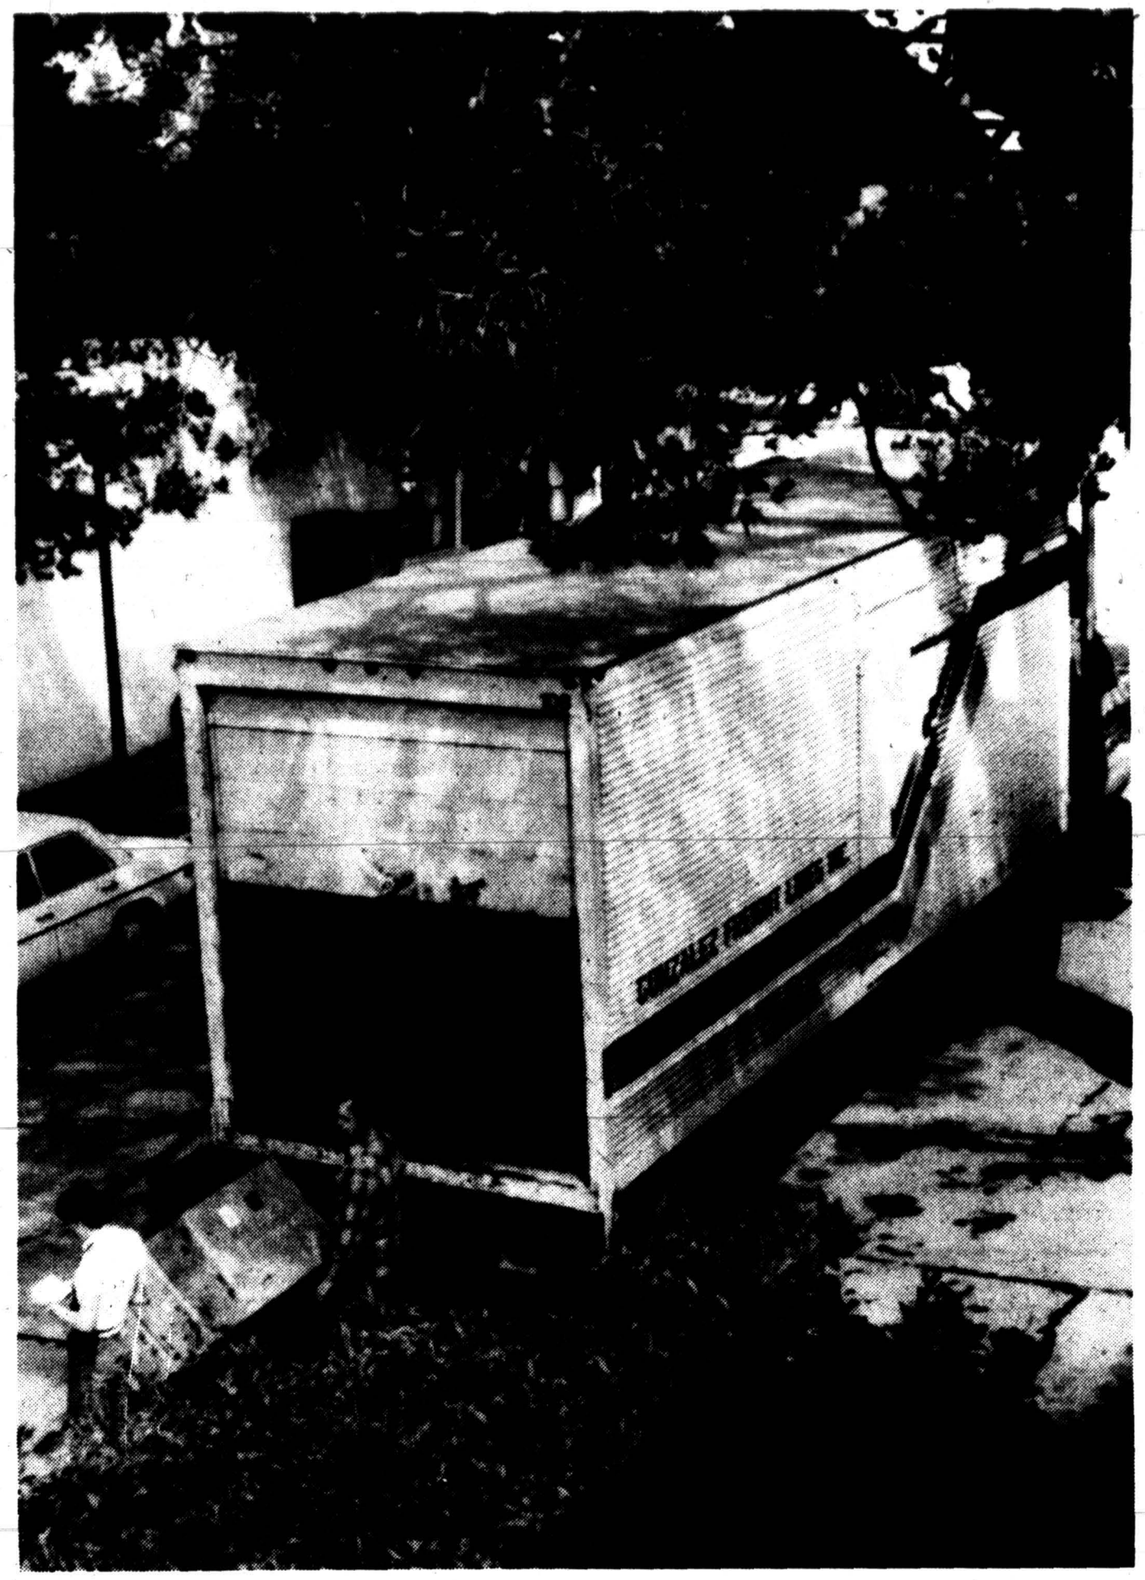
The arbitrary elimination of employee/employer parking will generate a "divisiveness" in the community, he believes.

"To simply eliminate parking, without alternative parking, would engender severe bitterness and cause needless adverse divisions within the community," Greenwood concluded.

The hearing last night was the second held by commissioners.

A public hearing on the less controversial elements, such as environmental safety, significant buildings and noise, was concluded May 20.

Only 10 people were in the audience and there were few public comments.



SEVERE RESTRICTIONS on truck deliveries could lead to major problems for local merchants, Carmel Business Association President George Greenwood told the planning commission last night. Above, truckers double parked on San Carlos Street to make a mid-afternoon delivery. A proposed revision in the general plan recommends that deliveries be restricted to before 10 a.m.

Officials pay tribute

Teacher Kay Goines to quit after 28 years in district

KAY GOINES, the prolific kindergarten teacher at River School for the past 17 years, will retire at the end of this spring term.

Mrs. Goines' resignation was formally accepted by the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education Tuesday. She has taught in public schools for 28 years.

"I don't see any possible way that we can replace Kay Goines," board President Ken White told the Pine Cone/Outlook April 21.

"Her presence in the classroom and at River School has been a significant thing for the district for so many years. It's a tough loss," White said.

"She is the great thing about public education. She is why people get into public education."

River School Principal Vance Frasier said Mrs. Goines has provided "immeasurable contributions."

"The thing that's most important is the immeasurable contribution that she's made to education," Frasier said. "That extends not only to the thousands of children but to the adults she helps through her lectures, and the parents.

"As a person, she exemplifies all of the qualities of compassion, human dignity and respect," he said.

Supt. William Rand added: "Kay Goines is an extremely energetic, talented and intelligent teacher who works magic with our children."

Mrs. Goines is in constant demand across the country and in Europe as a guest lecturer. She will retire to devote more time to her lectures.

Typically, Mrs. Goines wrote brief personal memos to all of the parents, her colleagues and friends before the public announcement of her retirement.

In the notes, Mrs. Goines talked about how fortunate she has been.

"How fortunate I am to have had a laboratory where miracles happen," she wrote to the parents. "How I love you and your child. How I'll miss you, everyone."

Another note to her colleagues read: "How fortunate I am to have tied a thousand shoes. How I shall miss the children, their parents and you."

And how the district will miss Kay Goines.

Piccadilly showdown faces city council at its May 3 meeting

By MICHAEL GARDNER

A STUBBORN Carmel City Council will cost taxpayers an additional $4,000 if it once again refuses voluntarily to place the disposition of Piccadilly Park on the ballot.

The council will have an opportunity to place the Piccadilly Park question on the November ballot when it meets at 7:30 p.m. May 3 at city hall.

The council is divided on whether voluntarily to place a "sell Piccadilly Park" measure before voters. It would cost the city about $1,200 if the measure is placed on the regular November ballot.

Instead, some council members believe former Mayor Barney Laiolo should continue his initiative campaign to force a special election at a cost to the city of about $5,500.

Laiolo, who claims to have signatures of more than 900 registered city voters on initiative campaign petitions, is willing to give the council a third try to order an election.

The council will be forced to call a special election if the Monterey County Elections Department certifies that at least 575 of the signatures on Laiolo's petitions are those of Carmel registered voters.

'I'll give them one last shot at it. I think they would be in very poor light with the public, especially with a regular election coming up. It just doesn't make sense to me,' Laiolo told the Pine Cone/Outlook.

The council in January refused a request by the Carmel Citizens Committee to place the issue on the ballot. Another chance was waived in mid-March after Laiolo announced his initiative campaign.

The process cannot be stopped once the "sell Piccadilly Park" petitions are submitted to the elections department, Laiolo said.

"I'll give them one last shot at it. I think they would be in very poor light with the public, especially with a regular election coming up. It just doesn't make sense to me," Laiolo told the Pine Cone/Outlook.

Carmel Citizens Committee Chairman Alan Williams, who repeatedly has asked the council to place the disposition of Piccadilly Park on the ballot, agrees with Laiolo.

"I would hope the council would put it on the November ballot themselves and ask then 'should we sell it or should we keep it?'," Williams said. "It makes a lot more sense to have it on the regular ballot."

There is a possibility of lawsuits or at least a second "save Piccadilly Park" initiative if the council refuses voluntarily to order a ballot measure, Williams believes.

•

WILLIAMS REFERRED to a recent decision by City Atty. George Brehmer that a planned "save Piccadilly Park" initiative is not legally valid.

"A lawsuit or second initiative would just divide the community further. The community doesn't want to see that happen," Williams said.

The "save Piccadilly Park" committee is expected later this week to announce whether it will rewrite the measure so that it qualifies as an initiative.

An initiative must be concerned with "legislative" matters. Instead, the "save Piccadilly Park" measure is basically "administrative," Brehmer ruled.

Councilwoman Helen Arnold, leader of the "save Piccadilly Park" campaign, said her committee may rewrite their proposal so that it asks the council to pass an ordinance to keep the park.

A request for an ordinance is "legislative" and would therefore qualify the measure as an initiative, Mrs. Arnold believes.

Despite election costs and further division within the community, the city council is still uncertain whether to place a measure on the ballot, according to members contacted by the Pine Cone/Outlook.

Council members Robert Stephenson and Helen Arnold are still firmly committed to the opposite ends of the issue. Mrs. Arnold will refuse to order an election. She is also the leader of the "save Piccadilly Park" campaign.

Councilman Stephenson has always been opposed to the park and continually votes to place the issue on the ballot.

"Absolutely not. For my money, he (Laiolo) started the process and now let him finish it," said Mrs. Arnold when asked if she had changed her mind about a voluntary ballot measure.

"The process is very important. The council is not going to circumvent the process," she said. "The council is not going to give him what he wants just by asking informally."

Stephenson is equally adamant that the question should go on the ballot.

"If the measure can be written in an unbiased manner that would satisfy both parties, certainly I would be in favor and I would make such a motion," Stephenson said.

Stephenson voiced concern that anti-Piccadilly Park organizers may be wary of a council that continually votes 4-1 (with his dissension) to keep the park.

•

'A MAJORITY has been consistently in favor of the park and unwilling to listen to the people," Stephenson asserted.

A committee of Mrs. Arnold, Laiolo, the city attorney and city administrator could be established to ensure a fair and unbiased measure for the November ballot, he suggested.

Councilmen David Maradei and Frank Lloyd — both longtime supporters of the park — are uncertain whether to place the disposition of the park on the November ballot.

"I generally try to go into a meeting without having my mind completely made up," Lloyd said.

Maradei is also unsure about his upcoming vote.

Told that Laiolo has at least 900 signatures, Maradei responded: "I think that's a clear indication. I'd have to see it and make the decision in public session. It would seem to make sense (to order a November ballot) if we can save some money."

A delay between a special election in the summer compared to a November ballot concerns Maradei.

"I don't like the delay. Can the city sustain six more months of a vacant lot? I really have to give it more thought."

Previously, Maradei insisted that the initiative process be carried out because voters in 1979 overwhelmingly approved purchase of the park. He said the council should not circumvent a citizen vote.

Mayor Charlotte Townsend was out of town and unavailable for comment.

The proposed Piccadilly Park would be developed on the west side of Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues. It was purchased by the city for about $400,000 in 1980.

Opponents of the park complain about its purchase cost plus the additional estimated $135,000 for landscaping. The 40-by-100 foot park is also too small, they claim.

Supporters of the park see it as an oasis in a downtown area crammed with shops. They claim that the site would only be used for development of more tourist-oriented businesses, which would lead to more people, more cars and more parking problems.

Told that Laiolo has at least 900 signatures, Maradei responded: 'I think that's a clear indication. I'd have to see it and make the dicision in public session. It would seem to make sense (to order a November ballot) if we can save some money.'

COUNCILMAN David Maradei is concerned that the residential character of the city may be destroyed if the council does not severely restrict the numbers of "second kitchens" and "granny houses." The council will discuss the issue May 3. (Michael Gardner photo.)

Maradei questions legalized second kitchens in Carmel residential zones are already being "eroded" by large two-story houses.

"I'm also considering asking for some type of a look at the whole development problem that is eroding the character of the community," he said.

"Another problem is that the small character houses are being destroyed and are being replaced by large two-story houses."

Councilman Frank Lloyd, long a supporter of second kitchens and granny houses, doesn't agree.

"We've allowed them year in and year out and I can't see where they've done any great harm," Lloyd said.

If the city prohibits these low-cost units, it will force the many longtime "little people" out of Carmel, Lloyd believes.

"Property values have become so high that it's forcing many residents out of town," he said.

•

LEGALIZATION OF second kitchens and granny housing is the only way Carmel can provide low and moderate cost housing for its citizens, Planning Director Robert Griggs said.

"I think they (the council) need to realize that we're not trying to allow building unnecessarily. The question they need to answer is: 'how do you meet the needs for low and moderate cost housing without second kitchens?,'" Griggs said.

"The city is trying to do it with senior citizen housing, but that won't meet the need of the working people. This is the only way we can do it," Griggs said.

Griggs said restrictions in the ordinance will help reduce the proliferation of the units in the residential zone.

And the council has added to potential problems by not requiring landlords to provide an off-street parking space, Griggs said. The planning commission recommended the requirement, but it was deleted by the council April 11.

"It (the council action) imposes parking on the community and not on the person with the second kitchens," Griggs pointed out.

The city is only required to provide 146 low and moderate cost units, which is its "fair share" as stipulated by the Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments (AMBAG), he said.

If the council is concerned about the number of the units, it could merely legalize 146, Griggs said.

Griggs estimates there are 250 to 300 second kitchens in the city. The Carmel Local Coastal Program recommends that the city allow up to 550 of the units to meet demands for low and moderate cost housing.

A second kitchen is usually defined as a separate unit or detached garage apartment that has a hotplate, sink and refrigerator.

Granny houses are units similar to second kitchens except that the proposed revisions require that one tenant must be at least 60 years old.

Under terms of the proposed revisions, granny houses only would be allowed on lots that are 6,000 sq. ft. or larger. A 400 sq. ft. granny house could be constructed on a 6,000 sq. ft. lot; a 560 sq. ft. unit could be built on an 8,000 sq. ft. lot and a 640 sq. ft. granny house could be located on a 10,000 sq. ft. lot.

•

REQUIREMENTS OF both granny houses and second kitchens stipulate that either the smaller unit or the main house must be owner-occupied. The provision is included to prevent speculation and proliferation of duplexes, Griggs said.

The council April 11 determined that an off-street parking space will not have to be provided by the landlord.

The council also agreed there could only be three second kitchens per city block. The number of tenants residing on a lot with a second kitchen will also be restricted. However, a second kitchen will be allowed on the 4,000 sq. ft. lots.

The proposed revisions in the residential zone may also have an effect on Mission Ranch Resort operations if the area is annexed to the city.

The revisions prohibit residential development in the Carmel River floodplain. About 20 acres of the resort property are in the floodplain.

The provisions would also prohibit expansion of the 25-unit motel complex.

The council so far has denied requests by Mission Ranch Resort owners to be excluded from the revisions. Resort owners want to meet with the city to develop a separate "master plan" for the area.

The revisions in the residential zone encompass all areas adjacent to the city that may be annexed. The revisions will serve as a prezoning policy for the city when annexation is proposed, Griggs pointed out.

In other action, the council will review a proposed negative declaration on the Environmental Impact Report (EIR) for a planned conversion of two office buildings to an apartment complex on the east side of San Carlos Street between Fourth and Fifth streets.

The negative declaration means that the project will not cause any adverse environmental impacts on the neighborhood.

The planning commission April 20 approved applicant Clyde Sturges' design for the seven unit apartment complex.

Sturges plans to convert the two existing offices, which are located in former houses, into four apartment units. The cottage in the rear and a new two-unit building will bring the total number of apartments to seven.

The project will be returned later to the planning commission for landscape design approval. Sturges wants to maintain the grass lawn while planners would prefer a drought-resistant plant landscape, Griggs said.

The council is also expected formally to declare Sunset Center as a significant building.

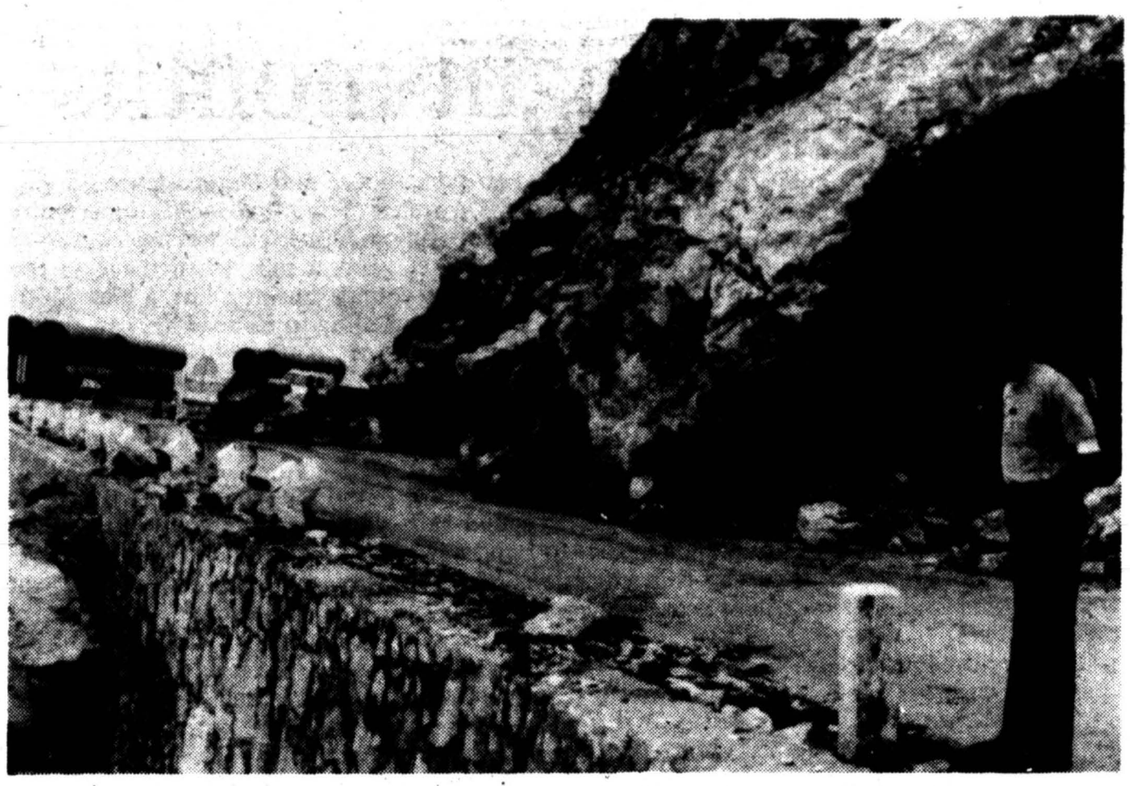
The significant building status will legally allow the city to make major repairs without bringing Sunset Center up to existing building and safety codes, Griggs explained.



RUSTY SEASTRAND, son of Assemblyman Eric Seastrand, peered over the edge of a wall that protected Highway 1 north of the Big Sur area last month during a visit beyond the barricades. Officials for the California Transportation Department said the highway north of Big Sur could open by early next week.

CONVOYS OF BIG SUR residents continue to travel the remains of Highway 1 north of Big Sur during limited hours, which are the only times residents can "escape" to the rest of civilization. The Big Sur Chamber of Commerce is ready to begin a public relations campaign designed to counter news reports about landslides which closed the highway. Chamber officials say they are concerned tourists will stay away from Big Sur this summer after reading and seeing news reports about the slide. The Los Angeles Times, for instance, carried a headline over a story about the landslides that stated: "Paradise Lost." Residents of Big Sur await road reopening

By JOE LIVERNOIS

'WITH HELP FROM God and Cal-Trans," Highway 1 south of Carmel to Big Sur will be open this weekend. And the people of Big Sur are certainly ready.

Big Sur has been practically shut off from the rest of the world for two months since heavy rainstorms triggered landslides that obliterated portions of Highway 1 — the only good road through the community.

In a region where residents pride themselves on their rugged individualism, the road closure has been a test for many individuals. The test has been met in true Big Sur style.

Holly Fassett and Gilbert Fulton of Nepenthe threw a high-spirited "thank you bash" for about 70 highway, telephone and gas and electric workers two weeks ago.

And employees at Ventana Big Sur gave "The First and Hopefully Last Stuck in the Mud Picnic" last month. "Of course, it rained," said Robert Bussinger, manager of Ventana. "But everyone showed up anyway."

Big Sur residents and merchants contacted by the Pine Cone/Outlook last week all said they anxiously await the opening of the highway north of Big Sur.

But they also said everyone in the community is in "good spirits" and "morale is high."

"I haven't noticed anyone who is depressed," said Forrest Childs, owner of Glen Oaks Restaurant, in a telephone interview with the Pine Cone/Outlook. "No, I take that back. My wife just pointed to herself."

Childs has kept his restaurant open three days a week to handle the local trade.

In the meantime, he and his wife have found plenty of time to ride their bikes and roller skate up and down Highway 1. "It's been a nice vacation," he said.

Gary Koeppel, owner of Coast Gallery, said he has "watched more movies than I've ever seen in my life."

Koeppel said he has never owned a television until he bought his first in December. He also bought a video cassette recorder to go along with it (television reception in Big Sur is practically non-existent).

So when nature put a halt to the tourist business in Big Sur, Koeppel spent a lot of time watching the tube — and reports he is not any more enlightened than before.

•

KOEPPEL HAS ALSO spent a lot of his time gearing up for a media blitz once the road does open.

As president of the Big Sur Chamber of Commerce, he has put together a "media kit" to deliver to 200 newspapers and television stations designed to herald the opening of the highway.

"We're trying to prepare for the news problem," he said. The problem is that the media swept into Big Sur when the disaster struck and probably will not do the same when the disaster is over, he said.

"When the road closes, it's big news," he said. "It's hot news. It's fresh news.

"But when the road opens, it's no news. It's cold news." Koeppel is the former publisher of the now-defunct Big Sur Gazette.

So if readers and viewers — all potential tourists — are not told the highway is open, their impressions of the disaster will linger, he said.

The financial losses have been bad enough as it is because Big Sur businesses have already lost "essentially about one-third of their year," Koeppel said.

Just ask Steve Lyke of the Esalen Institute in Big Sur. "We haven't had any paying week-long and weekend guests here since the 22nd of February," Lyke said. That represents a loss of about $50,000 a week, he said.

But the institute is not imperiled financially, he said. "And the way reservations are going, we will have signficiant numbers of people here once the road opens," he said.

Managing reservations has also kept Bussinger at Ventana busy.

"We'll have a full house when the road is open," he predicted cheerfully.

Bussinger has accepted reservations for the past three weekends, only to cancel them when it became evident the highway would not be open.

California Transportation Department officials have said highway reconstruction south of Big Sur will take longer to complete, perhaps another five weeks. But new landslides near the Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park could make it even longer.

Koeppel estimated two-thirds of all the vehicles that travel through Big Sur come from the south.

So the chamber of commerce will erect signs near Hearst Castle, where visitors arrive via Highway 46, which say:

YOU CAN GET THERE FROM HERE

The signs explain that motorists who wish to visit Big Sur this summer can return to Highway 101 and cut around Salinas and Monterey to reach Big Sur.

Koeppel pointed out that the Big Sur media blitz could also benefit the Monterey Peninsula, since about one-third of Monterey Peninsula summer tourist business arrives from Highway 1 through Big Sur.

"We're seeing the light at the end of the tunnel," he said.

While loss of income has kept the merchants nervous, all of them say they will be able to survive, including Steve Black of Coastlines bus service.

Coastlines typically makes two runs down the coast from Monterey to San Luis Obispo and, in only 30 months, the business was doing well, Black said.

Its 12 employees were busy. The tourists "seem to like the service a lot and the locals used it a lot," Black said.

"Having this disaster at the the time the business was just taking off is tough," Black said. "But we'll survive.

"We're ready and we'll be back on the road just as soon as God and Cal-Trans allows us."

In the meantime, life in Big Sur has been "laid back," he said. Residents are busy "shaking cobwebs out of their cabin-fevered heads," he said.

CV Master Plan committee meets April 28 to face major issues

THE CARMEL VALLEY Master Plan Advisory Committee will face up to some major issues when it meets April 28 in the Laguna Seca Golf and Country Club.

After three months, the committee has completed most of the detail work to create a master plan that would conform with the Monterey County General Plan and an environmental impact report for the Valley.

But the advisory committee still must decide what it will recommend on the following issues:

- The subdivision evaluation system,
- The land use map,
- The final buildout allocation and growth management,
- The areas of development concentration.

Last week, the committee briefly considered some of those issues and members appeared to be headed in the same direction in at least one of the major areas — buildout allocation.

The original Carmel Valley Master Plan certified by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors in 1980 allowed a maximum of 6,860 residential units in the Valley by the year 2000, or 2,500 more units.

Most of the committee members said last week they could be willing to accept a policy offered by chairman Don Harrison.

He proposed that the allocation of 2,500 units allowed in the original master plan be accepted, but that any units allowed in territory that has been removed from the original master plan boundaries be subtracted from the total allocation.

For instance, the Odello property near the mouth of the Carmel River has been removed from the master plan boundaries by the board of supervisors because land use policies on that property have been made by the Coastal Commission.

The Coastal Commission earlier this month certified the Carmel Area Local Coastal Plan which allowed 162 residential units on the east side of the Odello property.

•

IF HARRISON'S proposal is accepted by the rest of the advisory committee, those 162 units would be subtracted from the 2,500 units allowed in the original Carmel Valley Master Plan.

In addition to the Odello property, the High Meadows property on the northwest corner of the Valley has been removed from the master plan.

Before the boundary changes are official, property owners in both the Odello and the High Meadows areas must intervene in a county lawsuit.

Jose Ramos, deputy county counsel, said the county will seek a court-imposed boundary change once the court renders a decision on the applicability of the environmental impact report for the master plan.

Committee members agreed they want to investigate the buildout allocation issue a week before they discuss it further and that discussion will probably take place tonight.

The committee will meet at Laguna Seca from now on because several committee members live on the other side of the Carmel Valley Road landslide from the site of earlier meetings in St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church.

Committee meetings begin at 7 a.m.

Also tonight, the board is expected to discuss policy language that could restrict development in the Valley once traffic and air pollution ceilings are reached.

Rains may slow reopening

RAINS LAST WEEKEND could prevent the reopening of Highway 1 north of Big Sur by this weekend, according to California Transportation Department officials.

Herb Filipponi, Cal-Trans maintenance engineer, said the rains slowed paving operations along the reconstructed highway over the weekend.

Cal-Trans had announced early last week that it tentatively had scheduled completion of reconstruction work along Highway 1 by this weekend.

"They were shooting for this weekend, but it's beginning to look more doubtful," he said.

He said Granite Construction Co., the company that was given the paving contract, lost "a couple of days" because of the rains.

"To be sure, we are now saying the highway will be open the first week in May," he said. He also added that date could be extended if more rains fall this week.

Art McDole, emergency services coordinator for Monterey County, said the rains slowed down reconstruction of roads in the Garrapata and Palo Colorado canyons, but that the rains did not slow down county operations at the landslide on Carmel Valley Road.

McDole said county crews have started to drill into the landslide on Carmel Valley Road. Sample cores obtained in the drilling will be analyzed by the geologist the county has commissioned to give the county a detailed description of the slide.

Supervisors spend $183,690 in just eight months

By JOE LIVERNOIS

MONTEREY COUNTY supervisors have gone through $183,690 in the first eight and one-half months of the fiscal year.

Fifth District Supervisor William Peters of Carmel Valley was the second-highest spender among county supervisors, according to a report by the county administrative office.

Supervisor Peters was out of town last week for what his office staff called a "combination of personal and public business" in Washington D.C. "The trip isn't at county expense," said Steve Slade, Peters administrative aide.

Fifth District Supervisor William Peters of Carmel Valley was the second-highest spender among county supervisors, according to a report by the county administrative office.

Peters said when he returned that trips to Washington and county-paid trips to Sacramento are necessary in order to lobby for the county.

As an example, he said, he and Mrs. Shipnuck once saved the county Social Services Department "millions of dollars" with a trip to Sacramento.

With the state and federal governments tightening their belts, local governments are often the victim, he said. "But they listen to elected officials," he said. "If you're not there to lobby on the county's behalf, the county gets screwed."

He said that during his trip to Washington, he lobbied on behalf of the county on several issues, but most notably for construction of a dam on the Arroyo Seco River.

The report, prepared by county fiscal analyst Gay Strand, showed that Supervisor Michael Moore was the top spender at $43,409 from July l, 1982 to March 15, 1983.

FIFTH DISTRICT SUPERVISOR William Peters has earned and spent $41,313 in the first eight and one-half months of the fiscal year, according to an Administrative Office report commissioned by Supervisor Dusan Petrovic. Peters' spending was the second highest amount among the five county supervisors. Petrovic's was the lowest.

The expense report included salaries for supervisors, their aides, typists and temporary help, as well as office and travel expenses.

Peters had the next highest expenses at $41,313. Third District Supervisor Dusan Petrovic of King City spent less than any of the other four supervisors, at $27,842.

The report was commissioned by Petrovic and an administrative office spokesman said it was the first time in six years that a study of supervisors' expenditures had been made.

Most of the expenses cover salaries — both for supervisors and their aides.

Supervisors Marc Del Piero, Barbara Shipnuck and Moore earned $2,109 monthly, or about $25,000 annually.

Peters, as chairman of the board, earns $2,245 a month.

Petrovic has turned down all pay raises in recent years and his monthly pay is $1,680. Petrovic also does not hire a full-time aide.

About 8 percent of the approximately 2,630 Monterey County employees earn as much or more than a supervisor, Lupe Llano, Monterey County personnel analyst, told the Pine Cone/Outlook last week.

County employees who can earn more than supervisors include court reporters, the assistant treasurer, administrative nurses and "administrative service officers."

On the other hand, Monterey County supervisors this year must deal with a budget deficit that could reach $2 million. Department heads have been asked to trim their budgets and several dozen employees have been laid off.

And, as Del Piero said, "we knew what the pay was when we ran for office."

•

NEVERTHELESS, the two dozen department heads in the county, such as the agricultural commissioner and the director of social services, can earn up to $5,000 a month, Mrs. Llano said.

A Monterey County supervisor also earns less than most supervisors in other counties with populations comparable to Monterey County.

For instance, Sonoma County supervisors earn $31,000 and Santa Barbara, Santa Cruz and Tulare supervisors earn about $26,000 annually. In Bakersfield and Stanislaus counties, supervisors earn less than $20,000.

San Francisco County supervisors have always earned a notoriously low salary, a fact that former Supervisor Dan White underscored as one of the pressures that allegedly drove him insane when he assassinated Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk.

At the time, supervisors in San Francisco earned $9,600 a year. Last year, voters in San Francisco approved a pay increase that brought the pay up to about $23,000.

Bill Courtright, the San Francisco supervisors' budget analyst, said the average supervisor there spent in excess of $100,000 annually even when Dan White went on his murderous rampage.

Supervisors there spend $100,000 for office equipment and travel, while about half of that is spent on the two administrative aides they are allowed.

The pay increase raises the supervisors' pay "to just about the same as their administrative aides," Courtright said.

Aides in Monterey County receive a salary which ranges from $18,756 to $23,232 annually. Petrovic hires a secretary, whom he pays $13,250 a year. Peters and Moore share the services of a full-time secretary.

According to the report released by Ernest Morishita, the county administrative officer who earns approximately $54,000 a year, Petrovic, Moore and Shipnuck are the most well-traveled of the five county supervisors.

Supervisors, like all county employees, receive 26 cents a mile when they use their cars for county business, or a flat $150 a month, according to Slade. They can also use county-owned automobiles on county business.

Their combined travel expenses for the first eight and one-half months total almost $15,000.

Peters also said the job is "underpaid" but added that "no one is talking about raises right now."

Last year, Peters supported a supervisorial pay increase that passed by a 3-2 margin.

He was unsuccessful, however, in persuading fellow supervisors to pay his legal fees that accrued when he successfully defended himself in Monterey County Superior Court against allegations of impropriety.

"What the people don't seem to understand is that those trips can make millions of dollars for the county," said Slade, "or they can save millions of dollars for the county with the trips they take.

"They're not just going to parties when they go to Sacramento. I think there is a total lack of understanding about what the job entails."

•

RICHARD BUTRICK, deputy executive director of the County Supervisors Association of California in Sacramento, agrees.

"It's just crazy what a supervisor makes," he said. "It's completely ridiculous. For what they are required to do, they don't receive near enough compensation.

"It's great for demogogues to stand up and say their supervisors are spending too much money. But when it comes right down to it, a supervisor's pay has nothing to do with fairness.

"If five people were running a corporate office as big as Monterey, you can imagine what their pay would be."

Corporate officers have more than one aide to do their dirty work, also, Slade said.

He said he believes supervisors' aides provide vital services.

"Maybe Petrovic can get away without an aide in South County," Slade said. "But people on the Monterey Peninsula would be screaming their heads off if they couldn't contact our office."

Rick Humm, who heads the Monterey County Employees Association, said he does not know if the spending by the board of supervisors is "outrageous or not."

"It is interesting that there is such a wide swing, though," he said. "It's interesting that Del Piero and Petrovic spend much less."

CV Road may remain closed another 60 days, county says

MONTEREY COUNTY officials rivaled the late afternoon clouds for gloom Monday when they told Carmel Valley residents not to expect Carmel Valley Road to be reopened east of Mid-Valley until at least June 30.

About 150 Carmel Valley residents assembled in front of Valley Cinema to listen to Supervisor William Peters, geologist Bill Cotton and county officials tell them the county is doing the best it can, under the circumstances.

By the time the crowd arrived, the noose that had been hanging over the makeshift speaker's podium had been removed by Steven Slade, Peters' administrative aide. "That wouldn't make a very good backdrop," he said.

County officials had little good news to impart, but by the time the meeting was over and the situation was explained, there was no evidence that anyone, incuding the beleaguered Mid-Valley merchants, wished to string anyone up.

The noose did not represent Mid-Valley merchants' view of pending doom for the shopping center, which has lost an estimated 60 percent of its business because of the landslide that has separated Mid-Valley Shopping Center from the Carmel Valley Village, according to George (Skip) Toole, manager of Valley Cinema.

And the noose did not represent the merchants' disgust based on a perception that the county is dragging its feet to reopen Carmel Valley Road, he said. "It was just a joke," Toole said. "If it wasn't, I'm sure the noose would still be hanging when everyone arrived."

County officials had little good news to impart, but by the time the meeting was over and the situation was explained, there was no evidence that anyone, including the beleaguered Mid-Valley merchants, wished to string anyone up.

The meeting featured Bill Cotton, the Los Gatos geologist, who told the crowd that an act of nature is never so simple that a simple solution can be found easily, at least not without tremendous problems later.

It also featured Bruce McClain, the Monterey County Public Works Department director, who said that no matter how the county decides to rebuild Carmel Valley Road, the temporary detour around the slide would have to be closed for at least two weeks.

He also said that under the best scenario, a 24-hour, two-lane road through the landslide area could not be completed until at least June 30.

•

AND PETERS SAID the cost of any project would be about $2.5 million, of which about half would come from the the county budget.

When asked whether the county has the money to spend on reconstruction of Carmel Valley Road, Peters said: "The county has an obligation to do it and we're going to do it. We're just not sure how it will affect other services right now."

The crowd also applauded Don Koontz, the Carmel Valley property owner who lives near the slide. Koontz gave permission to the county to build the one-lane detour through his property — and several feet from his doorstep.

The detour is open about seven hours daily and, according to McClain, handles about half the traffic that would typically travel Carmel Valley Road during normal circumstances.

"Mr. Koontz has bent over backwards for the community," Peters said. "He has been imminently agreeable."

Nevertheless, at least one man in the crowd wanted to know why the detour was not open 24 hours a day.

Cotton described the landslide to the crowd as a "large mass moving very, very slowly." He said the estimated depth of the slide is between 30 to 50 feet.

He added that the hill behind the slide is "literally loaded with water" and the pressure from the aquifer is continually "pushing it."

He said that as long as the hill is unstable, "there is no way I will recommend that the county open up that road" because of the rockfall hazard.

Members of the audience asked if Cotton had considered recommending that the county blast the landslide, or inject more water into the mountain, to force the slide down.

He said those proposed solutions, which he called "drastic approaches," were dangerous.

"Whenever we deal with simple solutions, we usually end up with a lot of problems. It could cause additional problems that may endanger the rest of the mountain and the road would be closed forever."

Peters added that the nature of law has been almost as difficult to deal with as the laws of nature.

•

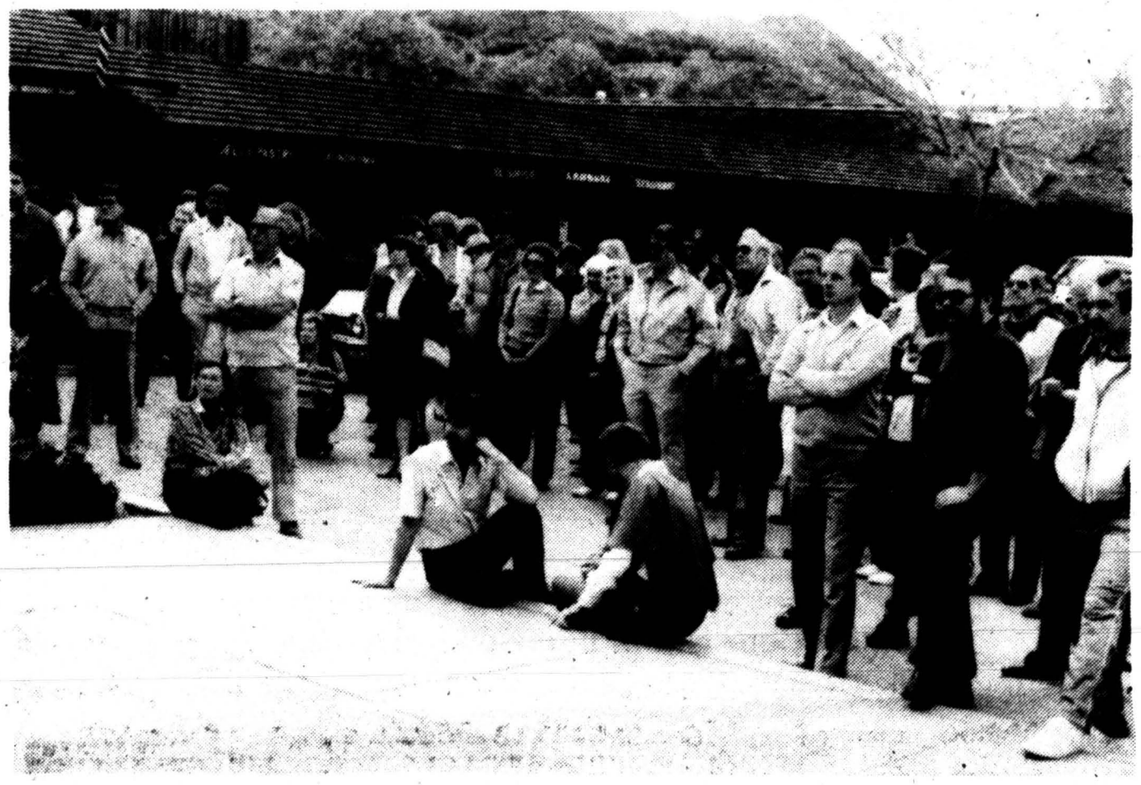
"THERE ARE ALREADY 50 or 60 legal issues we're dealing with," he said, though he would not elaborate.

The meeting was sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce of Greater Carmel and Carmel Valley.

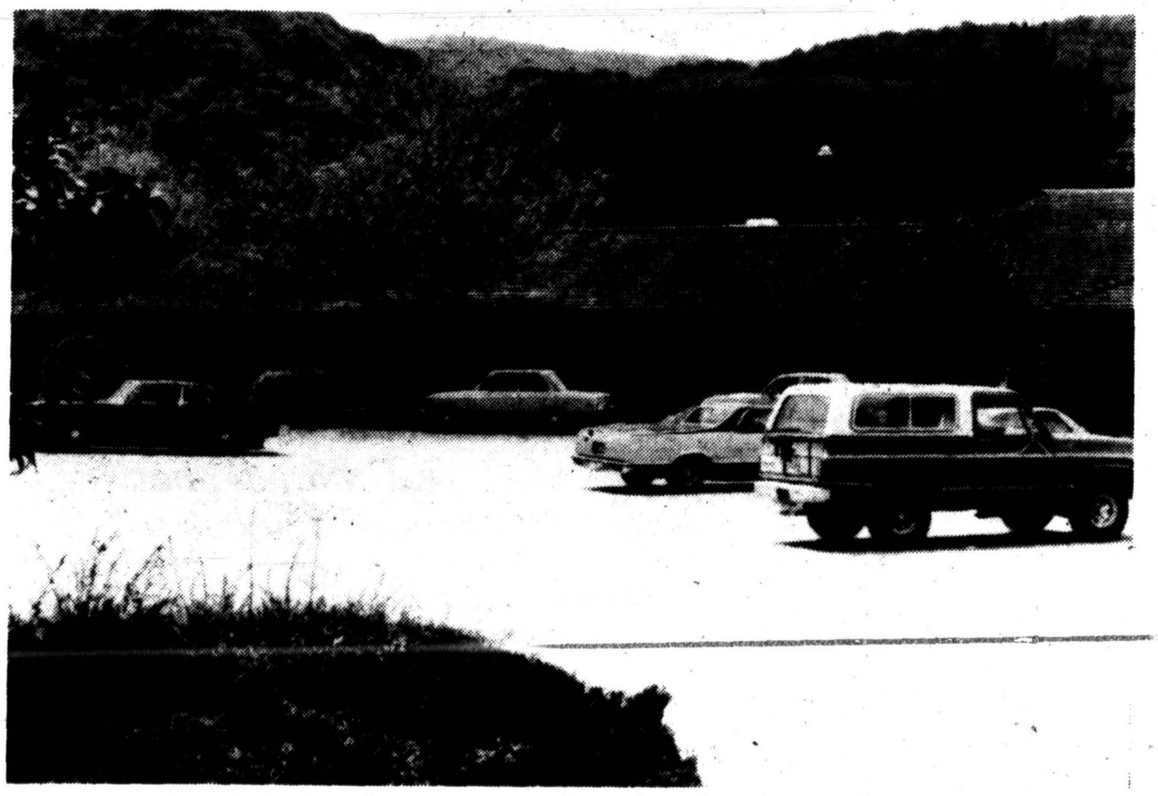
Dick Krueger, member of the Mid Valley Merchants Association, prefaced the presentation by urging the county to "work out a solution that is timely."

He noted that Mid-Valley merchants have been forced to lay off many of their employees because of the landslide and claimed that Monterey County already ranks 18th in the United States in unemployment.

INDIANA JONES (of Raiders of the Lost Ark) may have confronted an occasional landslide, but he did not have enough time in his adventures to be as pragmatic as Bill Cotton (left) and Fifth District Supervisor William Peters have been as they deal with the landslide that has closed Carmel Valley Road east of the Mid-Valley Shopping Center. Cotton and Peters answered questions in a forum in front of Valley Cinema Monday afternoon.



ABOUT 150 CARMEL Valley residents and merchants assembled in front of Valley Cinema in Mid-Valley Monday to hear Monterey County officials and a geologist explain why they do not expect a 24-hour, two-lane road around the landslide on Carmel Valley Road to be open again until at least June 30. (Photographs by Joe Livernois.)



A NEARLY EMPTY PARKING lot is an indication the Mid Valley Shopping Center in Carmel Valley is in a tremendous business slump after a landslide cut off customers who live east of the slide.

MONTEREY COUNTY Environmental Health Officer Walter Wong said he expects failing septic tank and drain field systems will continue in the subdivision along Rio Vista Road, north of Carmel Valley Road, shown here from near the entrance.

Septic tank failures probably will recur

THE CARMEL SANITARY District can probably expect more septic system failures in the Rio Vista Drive area, according to the Monterey County Health Officer.

But Walter Wong said he does not expect other homeowners along Carmel Valley to be forced to seek annexations to the sanitary district because of failing septic systems.

That would be welcome news to district directors, who were asked last week to annex property in the Rio Vista Drive area on which two drainage field systems have failed.

The property is located along Rio Vista Drive, which is across Carmel Valley Road from Carmel Middle School.

Sanitary district directors told Mary Brinton, one of the property owners, that they would like to help but can't right now because the environmental health department has not declared her neighboring property an "immediate safety hazard."

The environmental health department has declared two septic and leach field systems in the area "hazardous," according to Walter Wong, environmental health officer.

The only way to correct the situation is to tie into the Carmel Sanitary District system, Mrs. Brinton told the board at its regular meeting April 21. But she said the two homeowners would not be able to foot the bill, estimated between $40,000 and $50,000.

Mrs. Brinton has been able to receive commitments from about six neighbors who said they would also tie into the system, which would reduce the cost per unit.

She said she wanted to "get the feelings of the district" toward her annexation request "because we are meeting with the other homeowners to give them an idea of how to proceed."

But two problems exist that prevented the board from giving Mrs. Brinton its official "feeling," though individual board members said they understand her dilemma.

The "dilemma" that faces the district is that it is bound by its own ordinance that states no new property can be annexed to the district unless the existing sewer system presents an "immediate safety hazard," according to Mike Zambory, district general manager.

The district is also perilously close to reaching its licensed capacity. The California Resources Control Board has licensed the district plant to handle up to 2.4 million gallons per day, Zambory said. With that figure, the district can only "take care of the 500 lots of record already in our district," he said.

•

BUT DIRECTOR PAUL Beemer called the capacity number "arbitrary. We know that physically the plant can handle far more than that."

The dilemma, according to Chairman Ken McGinnis, was to figure out how to hook up the handful of area property owners without pressing health problems with the two property owners with health problems and maintain the spirit of the district ordinance.

Tom Updike, supervising sanitarian for the environmental health department, told the district that the entire Rio Vista Drive area "has a history for a number of years of failing septic tanks in the area. It's going to continue, I imagine."

Beemer said he expects "it will be a matter of time before the rest of the area is sewered."

If the health department determines that septic systems on those lots are doomed to fail, the district could be able to annex the area without violating its own ordinance, he said.

Updike noted that the health department responds to "complaints," and the sanitary district board was unwilling to "complain" about the neighboring lots. But Clayton Neill, the engineer commissioned by Mrs. Brinton, said he will formally request a health department investigation.

Wong said his department will investigate the Rio Vista subdivision.

He also said that under current county zoning regulations, drain field failures will not cause many more requests for annexation.

Wong said that when drain fields fail on one-half or one-quarter acre parcels, homeowners like Mrs. Brinton have no room to replace the drain fields and must find alternate sewage systems.

"When that area was subdivided in the old days, they paid no attention to the potential for drainage field failure," Wong said.

Today, however, property owners must have the space to replace their existing drain fields with 1,000 sq. ft. systems twice, he said.

"That's why the one-acre minimum zoning standards were applied," Wong said. "People were screaming bloody murder when the one-acre minimum went in, but drain field requirements were one of the reasons."

The only way to correct the situation is to tie into the Carmel Sanitary District system, Mrs. Brinton told the board at its regular meeting April 21. But she said the two homeowners would not be able to foot the bill, estimated between $40,000 and $50,000.

He said it is not likely that many more residents outside the sanitary district will be forced to seek annexation.

He also noted that the environmental health department tried to persuade residents in the Rio Vista area to annex to the sanitary district several years ago.

"But with only one or two failures occurring here and there, people are not likely to listen," Wong said.

In other action last week, the board heard from Zambory that the Environmental Protection Agency has not yet determined whether to give the district its share of money for a proposed reclamation project which would eventually irrigate area golf course with treated sewage water.

"The EPA review is still in progress," Zambory said. "From everything we heard, the vibes are good but there has still been no decision."

Since the EPA decided to review the reclamation project, the district was forced to "split" the reclamation project from plant improvement projects that were included in the same grant request.

The district already has received federal and state approval for the improvement projects and the board agreed last week to hire two engineering firms that will work cooperatively to provide construction management services for the project.

City eyes covered bus shelter at park at May 3 council session in city hall

In 1966, the number one pop song was Bus Stop by a group called the Hollies. It was a ballad about a boy and girl who fall in love after they share an umbrella while waiting for the bus on a rainy day.

Today, if the Carmel City Council has its way, there won't be any chance meetings under an umbrella while people wait for the bus near Devendorf Park.

The council is expected to review a proposal for a new covered bus shelter on the south side of Sixth Avenue between Mission Street and Junipero Avenue when it meets at 7:30 p.m. May 3 at city hall.

The proposal will be presented by City Administrator Douglas Schmitz and Councilman Robert Stephenson, who have worked on plans for the enclosed shelter.

Currently, riders must wait for the bus near the corner. There is a bench to sit on, but no protection from the rain and wind.

The council has discussed a shelter in the past, but has never formally approved purchase of a new site. Monterey-Salinas Transit District has allocated $10,000 to the city for the enclosed bus stop.

Stephenson — a building designer by profession — has developed preliminary plans for purchase and location of a new enclosed shelter.

The city will have to build a concrete block on park property near the fence to serve as the foundation for the shelter. The enclosed bus stop cannot be placed on the sidewalk because there isn't room, Stephenson said.

It will be placed between the two trees that face near Sixth Avenue in Devendorf Park.

The structure will be 11.5 feet wide, which will provide room for at least five people to sit down, he said.

The shelter will have safety glass panels on three sides. The front will be open because the wind rarely blows directly south, Stephenson added.

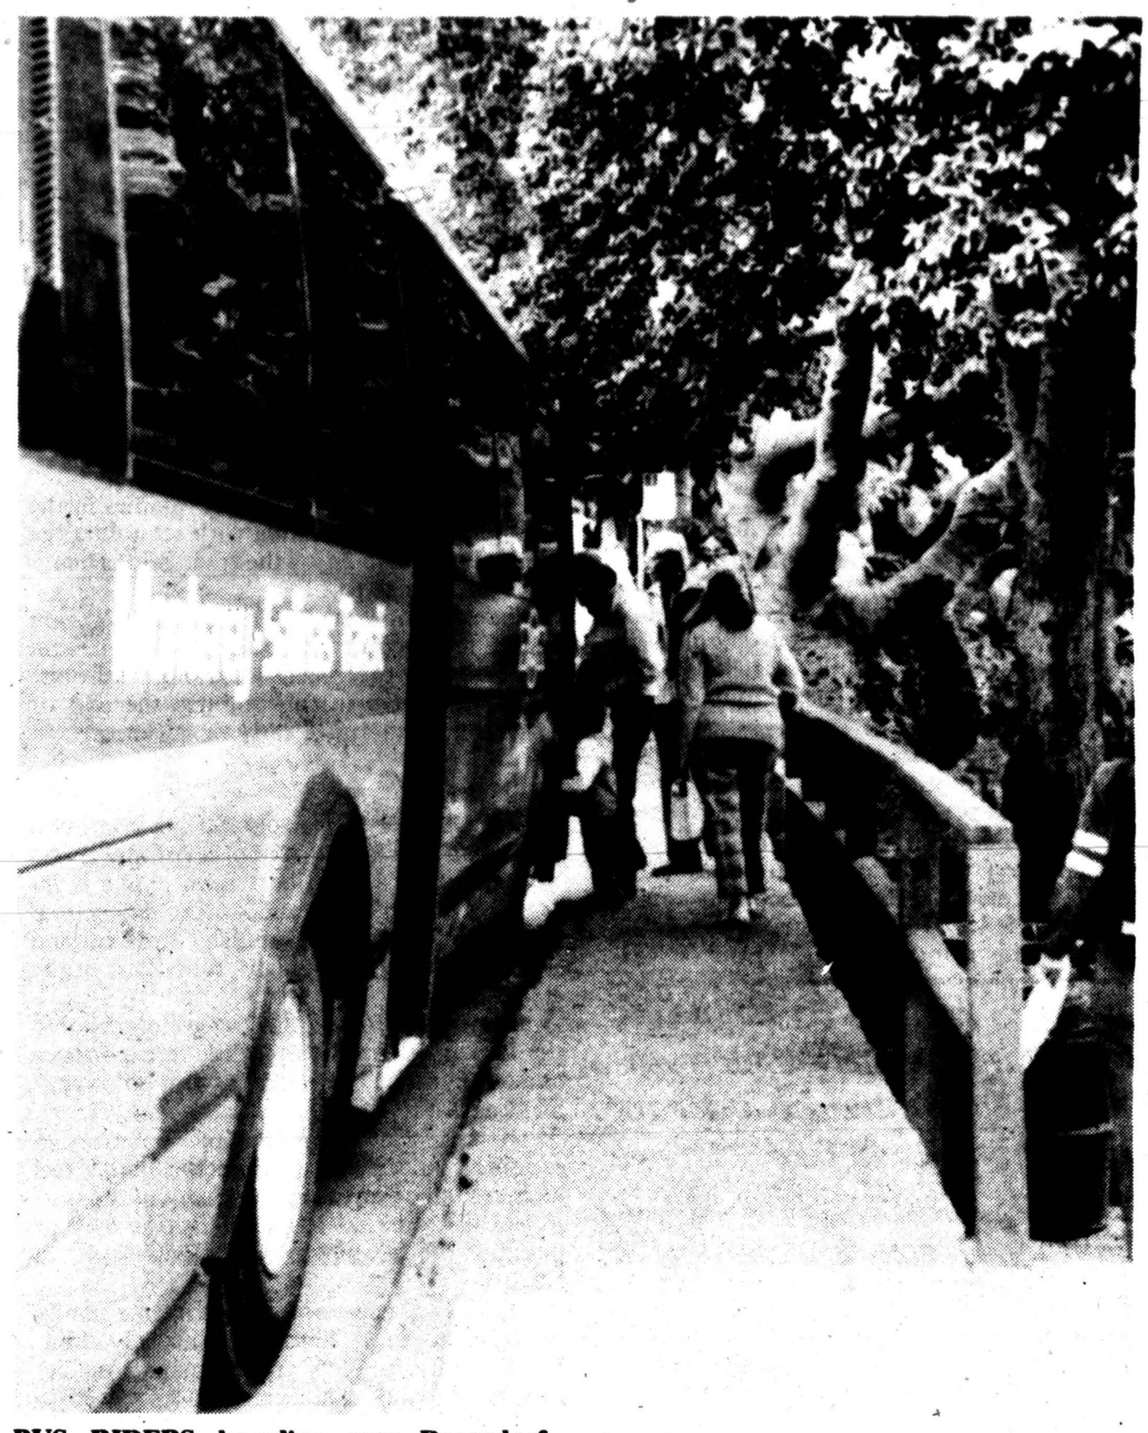
Cost of the shelter is estimated at $1,500 plus the expense of building a concrete foundation on the park property.

Stephenson said he also intends to discuss plans for a second enclosed shelter on the north side of Sixth Avenue between Mission and San Carlos streets.

A bench directly in the middle of the block gives bus riders a place to sit while they wait. However, the site is also unprotected from the wind and rain.

That stop will have to be completely enclosed because of the prevailing winds, Stephenson said.

In other business, the council is scheduled to approve second reading of an ordinance which would permit the construction of low cost housing on two city-owned lots on Dolores Street between Fourth and Fifth avenues as a conditional use. Consideration of the ordinance was continued by the council to May 3 at its April 19 meeting.



BUS RIDERS boarding near Devendorf Park may soon have a new enclosed bus stop to protect them from the wind and rain. A plan for the structure is expected to be presented to the city council May 3.

An intensive neighborhood watch program

May 1983 has been proclaimed "Neighborhood Watch Month" by the California Legislature at the request of Atty. Gen. John K. Van de Kamp. The Carmel Police Department will mark the occasion with the start of an intensive neighborhood watch and crime prevention program.

Police Chief John McGilvray referred to the program, which has been in planning stages for some time, as not being a formal one. "However, everyone in the department will be involved," he said. "The main thing is to get neighbors involved in helping each other."

A key phase of the program will be neighborhood meetings. Residents of Carmel are urged to contact Detective Pete Poitras at the police department, or in his absence, any available officer, to set up a meeting in their neighborhood.

"It can be for five, or 10 or 15 people," Chief McGilvray said. "An officer or several officers will come and discuss security measures, locking devices — whatever the residents want and need to hear about."

A number of brochures are available, covering such subjects as locks, crime prevention through the neighborhood watch, home security tips (which will also be published in the Pine Cone in conjunction with the weekly Police Log) and what to do to protect your property when you are away from home.

In addition, officers, who attend neighborhood meetings, will bring displays of various home safety devices — for doors, windows and sliding glass doors.

Chief McGilvray added that if businesses in Carmel are interested in a security program, "We'd be very happy to meet with them, too."

Foreign students hope to attend school in Carmel

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

MAGICIAN David Copperfield recently thrilled literally thousands of people when he made the Statue of Liberty disappear.

It was an illusion. The difference between an illusion and a dream is that one deceives while the other can offer hope — the opportunity to achieve.

Foreign students who attend school in the United States may be able to tell you that Men at Work is a hot rock group or that Michael Jackson is a groovy singer. But when asked why they want to go school here, they're not likely to discuss hamburgers or mom's apple pie. They will probably answer that it's a dream come true.

"I've been to the United States before and I love it," said Kerstin Elisabeth Tornovist, 17, of Sweden. "Going to school there would give me the opportunity to spend a year together with an American family and to adapt myself to their way of living and in an unaffected way to learn English. I also think it will do me good to learn to cope with and handle my own problems without having Mum and Dad around to help me."

'Living in and attending school in Carmel or surrounding areas would be a dream come true for these students,' said Dona Maria Taylor, area representative for ASSE.

Elisabeth, as she chooses to be called, is one of 15 Scandinavian and German high school students participating in The American Scandinavian Student Exchange program.

"Living in and attending school in Carmel or surrounding areas would be a dream come true for these students," said Dona Maria Taylor, area representative for ASSE.

"We're hoping to find host families in the Carmel area so that along with schooling the students can also enjoy the tremendous beauty your city has to offer."

The students, all 16 or 17 years old, are eager to become members of American families and to attend local high schools. They will arrive in this country the end of August and stay until early next June.

•

SEVENTEEN-year-old Sirkku Marketta Heinimaa of Finland is another student who hopes to find a local host family. She is interested in languages and during day school she studies English. Swedish, Russian and French. She attends night school to study Italian.

"My reason for wanting to go to school in the U.S.A. is that I would like to experience personally what life is like in your country," Sirkku said.

"It is such an important country in economic and political respect(s) that I feel it's very important for me to learn all I can. I would also like to learn English as well as possible to be able to speak and think in English."

Unlike Sirkku — who comes from a family of five children — Elisabeth is an only child. Her favorite subjects are languages, music, gymnastics and athletics. Besides Swedish and English, she is also learnning German and Spanish.

Both of Elisabeth's parents are teachers. "My parents love to travel so they have taken me to other countries so I have had the opportunity to learn about other cultures and ways of living," she explained.

KERSTIN ELISABETH TORNOVIST of Sweden is among the European students who would like to have her dream come true by attending high school in America. With the help of the American Scandinavian Student Exchange program, headed locally by Dona Maria Taylor, Elisabeth may be able to spend a year in Carmel.

"Ever since I was three years old my parents have taken me to Austria in the Alps to go downhill (ski) with them. Along with a lot of traveling they also sent me to scout and tennis camps and I think the combination has made me rather independent."

Elisabeth has worked at various jobs including babysitting, picking potatoes on a farm and as a clerk in a grocery store and a toy store.

"I'm not sure what I want to do as a profession but I do like working with children," she said. "During the practical vocational guidance at school I spent two weeks in a fourth grade as a teacher's assistant and I enjoyed it very much."

Her favorite hobbies are windsurfing and waterskiing. She has played tennis for eight years and has taken part in many competitions in Skane. She also likes basketball and rugby, which she describes as "a very tough but funny game."

Elisabeth has studied piano for nine years and sings in her school choir. She looks forward to continuing all of her interests in this country.

"Your school system is very different from ours," said Elisabeth. "I know I will learn a lot and will be a better person for it."

•

SIRKKU also hopes to continue her studies in this country. She is interested in photography and handicrafts but her main hobby is music. She plays piano, organ and flute and for the past three years has played violin in the orchestra of Rauma's Music Institute in Finland. She has participated in music camps and enjoys both classical and pop music.

"I also enjoy reading, especially detective stories," Sirkku said. "Just now I am reading a book about political life in the U.S.A. and I find it fascinating."

Sirkku said that she feels sports are important to both body and mind. She is accomplished in skating, orientation, judo, body-building and squash.

To earn extra money she has worked on a farm, picked strawberries and now has a part-time job delivering newpapers.

Sirkku enjoys going to school and said her favorite subjects are history, religion and French. "I love to write letters and have pen pals in many different countries," she said. "I'm also one of the editors of my school magazine and my job is to write articles dealing with music. It's nice to belong to the group."

Sirkku has a twin sister named Satu. Her brother Petri, 21, is studying biology at Oulu University. He was an exchange student in the U.S. five years ago. Her brother Markus studies medicine and her 17-year-old brother Jyrki is an exchange student in Albany.

"The nice thing about my family is that we get on well with one another," said Sirkku. "I'm looking forward to having that kind of

Mid-Valley Fire Department to offer instruction in first aid

THE MID-CARMEL VALLEY Fire Department will offer four-hour emergency first aid classes beginning May 28, according to Sidney Reade, public education officer.

The course is presented by the fire department "in an effort to improve the emergency medical service system in Mid-Valley," she said.

"Although the Mid-Carmel Valley Fire Department offers emergency medical services which are requested through 911, these services will not arrive until two to five minutes after 911 has been notified," she said.

"This response time, when added to the first minutes of trauma prior to notification of 911, can mean the difference between life and death or severity of injury. Therefore, it is essential that the person discovering the sick or injured be trained in basic emergency first aid techniques."

The classes offered by the fire department will cover cardio-pulmonary resuscitation, airway obstruction techniques, control of external bleeding and other basic first aid techniques for common causes of trauma and sudden illness.

Instruction will be given by members of the fire department who are certified American Heart Association CPR instructors and emergency medical technicians. A certificate of completion will be given to persons who complete the four-hour class.

Classes have been scheduled monthly, beginning at 8:30 a.m. May 28. Other dates include 8:30 a.m. June 25, 6 p.m. July 14 and 8:30 a.m. August 20.

In addition, special classes can be arranged for groups. For more information or to register for the classes, contact the fire department at 8455 Carmel Valley Road or call 624-5907.

Garland Park trail party April 30

THE FIRST ANNUAL Regional Park Trail Party will be April 30 in Garland Regional Park, according to Gary Tate, park director.

But where there is a party promised, there is usually work involved and that is true this Saturday. Tate said participants should bring along work boots, gloves and tools to help repair some of the damage done to the park during the winter rains.

The picnic and party come after the work is done, Tate said, "and refreshments will be served to help everyone forget their sore muscles."

The event is sponsored by the Friends of the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District and Garland Park was selected as the first beneficiary "because of the considerable amount of damage that has occurred in the park due to the unusually heavy rains."

The work will include repairs to the Waterfall Trail and the Garzas Canyon Hiking Trail. "There are a lot of different types of jobs available, as long as someone is willing to help," Tate said.

When the work is done, "we'll assemble on the Mesa for our first annual party."

The work begins at 8 a.m. at the Garland Park Visitor's Center, Tate said "and it will be an all-day event." Persons who plan to participate should call Tate at 659-4488.

Also on Saturday in Garland Park, Carmel River Watch has scheduled a River Ecology Day.

Tate and a number of other persons knowledgeable about Carmel River will be on hand to share their knowledge with the public, according to Darby Worth, coordinator of the event.

River Ecology Day is scheduled to begin at 11 a.m.

relationship with a host family in your country."

•

TO DESCRIBE the students involved in the exchange program Mrs. Taylor said: "In general they are very outgoing and easily adaptable to the American way of life. There will be no language barrier as all of the students have studied English at least six years and they are carefully selected for the program."

Once a host family has offeret their home to a student, Mrs. Taylor meets with the family to help select the student most suitable to that particular family. She is also available to the student and family throughout the school year.

All the students are covered by medical and liability insurance and have money for personal needs supplied by their parents. The host family provides a room (the student can share a room with a family member), a quiet place to study and meals.

"Families with teenage children are ideal," Mrs. Taylor said. She added that families with one parent or with small children or no children are also accepted. "The main thing is the family's willingness to open their home to a foreigner and have a loving and caring attitude towards the student."

The ASSE also encourages American students who are 15 to 18 years of age to spend a school year or a summer in one of the Scandinavian countries or in Germany.

Anyone interested in being a host family to any of the 15 students participating in the exchange program should contact Dona Maria Taylor, 719 Loma Prieta Drive, Aptos, Calif. 95003 or call her at 662-3157.

Senior citizen housing committee off to a brief and breezy start

A special Carmel City Council-appointed committee on senior citizen housing spent more time on the selection of a chairman than it did to complete its agenda business April 25.

The committee established a June 17 deadline for applications to develop a low-cost senior citizen housing complex on two city-owned lots on the west side of Dolores Street between Fifth and Fourth avenues.

The committee will then meet June 20 to review the applications and make a recommendation to the council.

The decision to establish the June 17 deadline was made within three minutes. It took the committee several more minutes to select Sandy Swain as chairwoman.

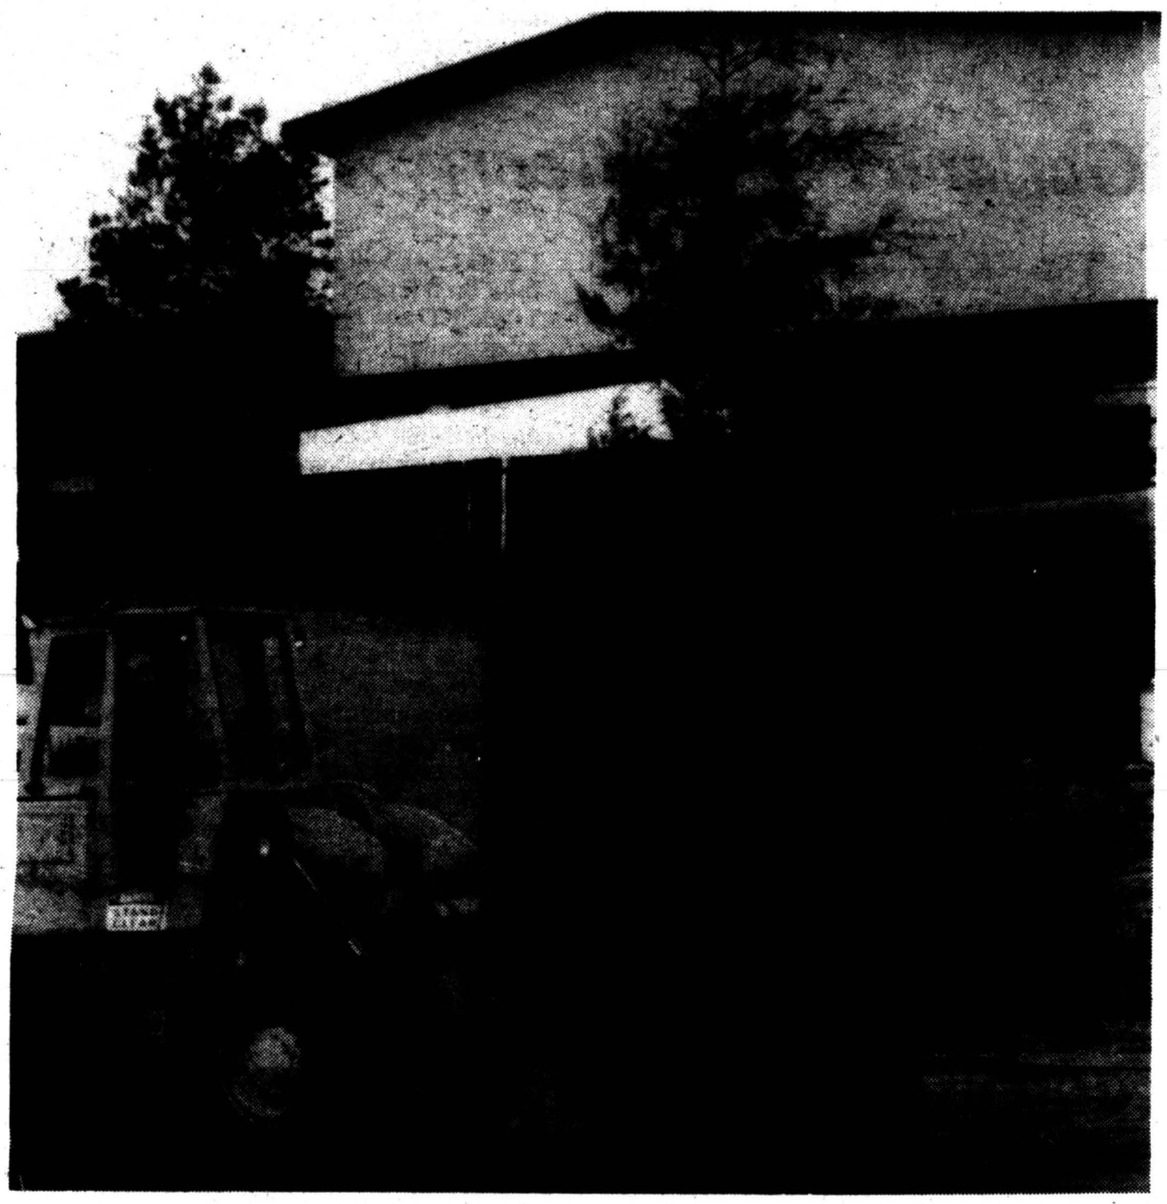
Committee members at first wanted to have City Administrator Douglas Schmitz serve as chairman. Schmitz declined; he said it would be too time consuming. Planning Director Robert Griggs also declined.

The meeting was so brief — approximately 15 minutes — that member and Councilman Frank Lloyd missed the entire session. He had earlier called to say he would be late.

Other members of the committee are Councilwoman Helen Arnold and Planning Commissioner James Wright. Wright was also absent.

The city council has adopted a plan to donate the two 4,000 sq. ft. lots to a non-profit organization that will develop a low-cost senior citizen housing complex on the site.

The Carmel Foundation, the Salvation Army and Pacific Grove developer Nader Agha have expressed an interest in the project.



Carmel holiday tree

IT WILL be Christmas in spring May 1 when the city presents a dedication ceremony for the new holiday tree. The ceremony will begin at 10 a.m. at the intersection of Ocean and Junipero avenues. Events planned include songs, a visit from Santa Claus and a talk by Gordon Miyamoto about how his father planted the first holiday tree in the early 1900s. Above, Bernard Martino helped unload the new holiday tree. The public is invited to the free event. (Michael Gardner photo.)

"CLAIM THE KINGDOM OF GOD WITHIN YOU - IT'S YOURS"

Presented to the community by First Church of Christ, Scientist, Carmel.
All are welcome. Free child care is provided.

THE RIGHT SIDE of the Peter Harding home buckled April 20 when cables wrapped around the house by Monterey County Public Works Department workers were pulled by a tractor. The house was toppled and the rubble removed to make room for a drilling rig so a county geologist can determine the character of the landslide that destroyed the home and blocked passage on Carmel Valley Road.

Tottering house teeters over

LAST WEEK, the public works department tore down the Peter Harding home that had been perched precariously atop the landslide.

With the house out of the way, county workers were able to extract one of three core samples from the landslide with a drilling rig.

The core samples will be analyzed by Cotton.

At the same time, Harding's attorney filed a claim with Monterey County to assure "that the county doesn't hold me liable" for potential damages as a result of the slide.

"The wording in the abatement order was left open to interpretation and we just wanted to make sure we are not held liable," Harding said.

He and his family now reside in their Big Sur home and Harding told the Pine Cone/ Outlook "there is no more personal attachment to the home."

He did say, however, that he will remain active in decisions regarding the landslide.

"I would like to see that the cut that's left after the county finishes its work is not another eyesore and another problem," he said.

"One of the big problems on Carmel Valley Road and Highway 1 in Big Sur is the big cuts they made for the roadways. I'm interested in seeing that the repairs made to the landslide will not create more problems."

WITHIN TWO MINUTES, the $200,000 home was completely destroyed. The precarious perch of the home had attracted hundreds of sightseers since news of its demise circulated through Monterey County. (Photos by Joe Livernois.)

CARMEL HIGH SCHOOL — April 1983

Senior class looks forward to future

By KATHY HUBBARD

Spring: probably the best time of the school year. Usually it's sunny and everyone is in a great mood. There's so much to look forward to: the warm weather (hmmm...) the prom, summer time and most of all for the seniors — graduation!

This year's senior class is a special one. Although they weren't expected to be one of those "vintage" classes that everyone remembers, they proved that wrong. In the past, this class was never what one would call "united."

This year they shocked the whole school. They stuck together as a class all year. One of the most memorable times was when a good part of the class got together and worked on their homecoming float. They beat the rest of us by far.

I think the juniors and the seniors had a special closeness, maybe because we are the closest in age. I often wonder what everyone will be and do in the future. There are some people in the class whose names are synonymous with their unique personalities.

I know one girl is the class "leader." She can persuade anyone to do anything; class spirit is important to her. The class of 1983 is leaving us with some important lessons as well as some unforgetable memories. As the class below them, we look up to them and as much as we hate to admit it, (we juniors have our pride you know!) we grew up a little more by watching them.

During this time of the year, not only do I sense the anticipation stirring in these kids, but even some uncertainty. It makes me think about how it will be our turn next year. We take over where they leave off ... seems like a big responsibility to be at the top with no one to look up to.

We have some of the best friends we've ever had who are graduating in less than two months. They are special people and we understand their doubts, fears and dreams. After seeing what they proved this year I have no doubt that most will succeed.

HAPPY GRADUATION CLASS OF '83!
Good Luck and Have a Happy Life!

Many memories will be left behind us

By SAM SALERNO

As the end of the school year nears, many seniors look ahead to the future and wonder what's going to happen. All in all, it's been a fun four years. But, there have been times of sorrow and a lot of growing up to do. Once you become a senior, the school almost seems like it's not really your own any more.

Seniors leave after lunch or they might go to work. To be perfectly honest, some are just not found in class any more. The school doesn't seem like it is as much a part of your life because of more pressing matters outside of campus. At this point of the year, there seems to be an almost nervous anticipation about leaving and getting school over with.

Carmel is basically a boring town for the teenage population. So, a change of pace may be the best thing for the seniors after graduation. Granted, some graduates will stay around for a few more years, but I can't help but think that most of the seniors would like to experience a new area and a new environment.

Many memories will be left behind when the class of 1983 graduates and so will many questions that are asked and usually never answered, questions like: "Why did this person have to die?" "Why didn't that relationship work out?" "What am I going to do? Where will I end up?"

Many disheartening acts of life come your way in such a short time. The best way to get through school life is to never take these matters too seriously. But believe me, sometimes even for a teenager, that can be very hard. The time has gone by so fast. It's here one minute, then gone the next. I guess that's the way life is too.

We are all going to miss Carmel High and all of the friendships we've made very much. Now, all that we can do is accept the passing time and look ahead.

TARA MUELLER

Student of the month

Carmel High School senior Tara Mueller has been selected student of the month by the physical education department because of her excellent academic standing and her interest in sports, including gymnastics, swimming, water skiing, biking, and aerobics. In addition, Tara's unusually wide range of interests encompasses photography (her favorite subject, with world literature), French, poetry and drawing. Tara has a strong concern for our environment.

Tara transferred to Carmel High School this year from Wisconsin, where she was a member of the National Honor Society. She has traveled to many exciting places: New Zealand and Australia, the Caribbean, Tahiti, and Bora Bora. She has seen the Great Barrier Reef.

Her visit to France probably helped to establish her interest in the French language, which she hopes to continue to study in college. She is trying to decide where to attend college: in the east at Wellesley, Mount Holyoke, or Amherst — or in California at U.C. Berkeley or Mills.

KRISTINE TAROZZI

Outstanding CHS student

Seventeen-year-old Kristine Tarozzi has been named as the outstanding student at Carmel High School for May for her business achievements. Kristine has been enrolled in the regional occupational program accounting class, taught by Chris Helgason, for the past two years. She is employed at a local business and works frequently with computers.

Kristine may also be noted for her contributions to Carmel High School and the community. She has been a cheerleader for the past four years, in two of which she served as head cheerleader.

She is a talented dancer and a member of the Monterey Dance Workshop Ballet Troupe. She dances with the Carmel High School Dance Workshop. Before she went into dance, Kristine was in gymnastics for three years. She was on the team of the Monterey Gymnastics Center.

Kristine plans to attend a private college in the bay area to pursue business and dance next year after her graduation in June.

Principal's message

By MARSHA KADING-KELLY

"When it comes to the future, there are three kinds of people: those who let it happen, those who make it happen, and those who wonder what happened."

Our students at Carmel High School have the potential to make it happen. As we approach the end of the school year, with our increased responsibilities and obligations, we watch with wonder and amazement as things fall into place.

We are in the midst of planning our graduation ceremony. The Class of 1983 has accomplished a great deal. Their parents, friends, and teachers will have every right to be proud of them at 4 p.m. June 10 as they march onto Bardarson Field. We hope that our friends in the community will share this beautiful day with us.

As of this writing, Jim Helgason's varsity baseball team is undefeated in league play. Jack Ellena's softball team is tied for second place. Jim Agan's swim team has had a good season. The tennis team, coached by Dave Chaney, is in second place. Bob Brooks' track team has yet to participate in its second meet. Buzz Rainer's golfers are first in the league. We are so proud of our student athletes.

The future promises excitement for the Carmel High School community as we anticipate the renovation of our buildings to begin in the fall. There is so much nostalgia about Carmel High School that we expect a great deal of participation by alumni in the planning of the renovation.

Can dreams come true? It's worth a try!

By ALEXIS PHILLIPS

There are people who wonder: "What are lifetime dreams?" Some say they don't have these kinds of dreams, but that's not true. Whether it's a hope, a goal, an ambition or even a wish on a falling star, everyone has a lifetime dream.

Some people won't admit it, maybe because they're scared. However, having dreams is nothing to be afraid of because they can't take from people, they can only give.

For example, dreams give people a sense of who they are, a sense of what they want to be. Most of all, they give one a sense of what direction they're going in.

"Imagine," is a song by John Lennon about his dream for peace. In the song he sings: "You may say I'm a dreamer ... but I'm not the only one. I hope some day you'll join us ... and the world will be as one."

Of course "us" refers to himself, Martin Luther King Jr. and everyone else who admits they have dreams and do everything they can to make them come true. There isn't peace on earth yet but the hateful law of slavery has been abolished, which proves that dreams do come true.

In any case, everyone should try to make dreams come true because there are people who ask what a lifetime dream is. There are also people who ask what a lifetime without a dream is.

Business Beat

More changes for business

By FLORENCE MASON

A RECENT transfer of ownership for one Carmel business revealed still another change as the game of "musical businesses" continues.

New owners of the Village Sport Shop in the Doud Arcade are Joan and Mike Cloran. If the names are familiar, it is because the Clorans have been owners and operators of San Antonio House, a guesthouse in the residential district, for the past nine years.

And they told me that the new owners of San Antonio House are another well-known local couple — Karen and Dennis Levett. Their names should be familiar as owners of Vagbond House, the beautiful country-style inn at dolores Street and Fourth Avenue. When I catch up with the levetts, I'll tell you more about their new interest too.

Mike Cloran told the Business License and Code Review Board that the new shop will be "a fun business" for his wife. Joan Cloran confirmed this and said active involvement in San Antonio House for nine years had been "a long time." She added: "Though we'll miss certain aspects of it, especially our wonderful guests, some of whom had been coming for 25 years or more."

The Clorans don't plan to make any changes in the Village Sport Shop — the name, and the merchandise (ladies' active sportswear) will remain the same. So will their staff: a full-time manager, Judy Sommer, and a part-time saleswoman, Deborah Smith. Mrs. Cloran will take care of the books and buy for the shop.

Mike Cloran has been active in local real estate with Carmel Realty for eight years and welcomes the additional time he will have to devote to that business. But the couple travels extensively and looks forward to even greater opportunities for that avocation.

They recently built a new home on Lincoln Street, where one of their neighbors is a man who, they say, was "a marvelous motel sitter." That is Stanley Page, who also enjoys looking after the Clorans' Labrador retriever, Fred, while they journey.

FROM "TOP KNOTS" TO "MARCH HARE"

It's not a new shop. In fact, it has been in Carmel 20 years, but it does have a new name to go along with extensive remodeling and redecorating.

Top Knots, a beauty shop on the corner of Mission Street and Fifth Avenue, has been transformed and will reopen in May as March Hare Hair Designs. Bill Clay, co-owner with his wife Frances, told members of the business license board they would have to ask his wife about the name: "She woke up early one morning and said 'I have it'!"

LAURA NORMAN has opened "Laura's Lady Fingers Nail Boutiques," in May Court on Mission Street between Sixth and Fifth avenues.

Frances Clay gave credit to her niece. "We were sitting around talking about it and my neice came up with it. That's when I said 'That's it!' she related. She added that the name appealed to her because it was different from the usual beauty shop names and seemed to fit into the Carmel scene.

The shop has been closed since last August for remodeling and redecorating. "It will include five booths on a rental basis. The decor is now a little on the plantation theme — ceiling fans, for instance," Frances Clay said.

The Clays, who have owned the shop since 1976, are Pebble Beach residents.

AND FOR CHRIS — 21 YEARS

Last week Chris of Carmel celebrated her 21st anniversary in Carmel with a wine and cheese tasting party at her hair and skin care salon at Lincoln Street and Seventh Avenue. It was an occasion to reminisce and to look ahead.

Memories included Chris Roque's start here at the June Turner Salon in the old Carmel Plaza in the 1960s. She had her first salon on Lincoln Lane and moved to the Nielsen Professional Building nine years ago.

Chris has been affiliated with Redken Laboratories as a cosmetologist and educator since 1970. Her salon is a Redken Research Division Test Salon for "the latest in product knowledge and innovative styling techniques."

Chris and her associates — Kay, Suzanne and Yvon (Ivan), all former Redken salon owners or managers — can add up a collective 65 years in the beauty business.

Chris and her staff have organized and sponsored fund-raising events for a number of community organizations, including the Hospice, YWCA, Garden Pavilion of Community Hospital, Girl Scouts and others. They are currently involved with Project Worth.

In a time of rapidly changing ownership of local businesses, it is a special pleasure to report and pay tribute to Chris, of and for Carmel.

IT'S MOVING TIME — AGAIN

You might call Denise Borsella "peripatetic," but she confines her moves to Carmel. The attractive owner of Skin Fits Leather is making her third (or is it her fourth?) local move: this time from Sixth Avenue and Mission Street to the Vandervort Court (San Carlos Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues).

Dee told the Carmel Business License and Code Review Board she will be upstairs at that location (over the health food store, where Thomas Houston, Goldsmith, had been located) because it is better suited to the new emphasis in her work.

She said she wouldn't turn away any retail business (she designs, manufacturers and sells leather clothing) but that she is involved in "more of a wholesale and service operation — alterations, for example." Dee explained that part of the reason for this change of emphasis, and her move, is that she doesn't want "to be tied to it seven days a week."

BACK TO NEW BUSINESSES

"We're trying to take as much of a load off the family as possible," said Margarite Poncia about the new business that she and fellow Carmelite Judy Higgerson, R.N., have just opened. It is the Monterey Coast Home Nursing and Temporary Services on Via Nona Marie, near the mouth of Carmel Valley.

This nurses' registry serves long-term, full-time needs of patients and their families as well as temporary needs. Registered nurses, licensed vocational nurses and nurses' aides are among the professional workers they interview and then place in patients' homes. Miss Poncia said that is one way in which their emphasis on the personal touch is effective: they interview the nursing applicants individually and try to fit not only their professional skills but their personalities to a particular situation.

"Then we outline the plan to the family, including options about the hours and the intensity of care, with consideration for the financial resources available," she said. She added that she and Judy Higgerson supervise their workers and may take on additional tasks for the patient's family, such as helping them to order medical supplies.

Margarite Poncia grew up in Carmel and attended local schools, from Carmel River School through Monterey Peninsula College. Her aunt and uncle have lived here 50 years, her mother and stepfather for 35. Margarite lives on Tierra Grande in Carmel Valley, loves golf, tennis, skiing and reading.

Her partner, Judy Higgerson, left the peninsula only to get her nurses training at a large teaching hospital — Methodist Hospital in Memphis, Tenn. "This is my home," she said. She lives in Pacific Grove, is engaged to Jerry Gates, who has his own new business (Gates Tree Service). She likes aerobic dancing, tennis, reading and sewing — especially hand crewel work.

Versatile Margarite Poncia is also associated with a Carmel investment firm. She plans to keep her broker's license and her clients, but realizes that the new nurses' registry will require much of her time for the present.

STEVEN KYLE

After 10 years' experience working for other architectural firms, Steven Kyle has established his own. It is Carmel Architectural Group in the Rio Rancho building, next to the post office at the mouth of the Valley.

Kyle used to vacation here with his family and after he got his B.A. at the University of Illinois he worked in Illinois for a time. Five years ago he decided to move to the peninsula.

He has been an active member of the community since that time, working with the Monterey Jaycees and serving on the city of Monterey's Architectural Review Committee. In his spare time he puts his membership in the Carmel Valley Racquet Club to good use.

While Kyle said he didn't want to pin himself down to any one specialty in his field, he did say, "We do a lot of apartments and condominiums as well as office and commercial work."

LAURA NORMAN

Enter the name of Laura Norman on the roster of young women entrepreneurs on the Carmel business scene. She is the owner of Laura's Lady Fingers Nail Boutique, and it is her first venture on her own.

Her salon, right next to the Carmel Cutting Room in the May Court (Mission Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues) features artificial nails, nail wraps and nail sculpture. Silk nails are the newest specialty, Ms. Norman told me.

To be a neighbor of Sal Greco's new Cutting Room — in fact, to sublease the space from Greco — is expected to prove of mutual benefit to the two business owners. "We'll be referring clients back and forth," Laura Norman explained.

She came here about three years ago from Malibu, lured by visits with her sister, Paula Scott, an aerobic dancing teacher. For several years Laura worked as a waitress at the Hog's Breath and the Clock in Monterey. Then she decided to go to school and become a manicurist. Owning her own shop was the next move, an exciting one for her.

Engaged to Michael McOmber, a local contractor, Laura has a new home on Brookdale in Carmel Valley. She has a daughter, Lindsey, who is five and a son, Cody, one year old, from an earlier marriage. Horseback riding is one of her favorite avocations, and she is also a ceramic artist. Dancing and swimming are on her agenda as often as possible. She swims a quarter mile each day, weather and time permitting.

STAR-TECH

Do you want to be able to bring in 100 channels on your television set? It isn't legally possible to make such arrangements with available equipment if you live in the city of Carmel, but there is a new business in The Crossroads mall that can make it possible for residents of outlying areas such as Big Sur, Carmel Valley, the Highlands, Pebble Beach and Laguna Seca, as well as Salinas.

Star-Tech, which opened earlier this month between Long's and Safway, chose this area for its first retail store. The parent company is a manufacturing company in Soquel. It turns out satellite TV discs that range in size from 8 feet to 13 feet in diameter and cost from $2,000.

Brian Jacobs is the local marketing manager and Marsha Sterling is on the sales staff. Both have worked for the company in Soquel and still commute to Carmel. Jacobs, as marketing director, will start other stores in California. The next is planned for Saratoga.

Ms. Sterling, who has been with the company about six months, said 300 satellite TV discs have been sold directly from the company manufacturing plant and 10 have been sold in the first two weeks The Crossroads store has been open.

Carmel's planning commission studied the innovative equipment last year and passed an ordinance limiting the size of discs in Carmel. But the owners of Star-Tech equipment who live outside the city are told that their present equipment can pick up 100 channels "from Mexico to Alaska and from San Diego to Quebec."

NOTED

As a sample of tax monies allocated to the city of Carmel by the county of Monterey: in March, Carmel received $6,916 as its share of vehicle license taxes; $4,330 in motor fuel taxes; and $2,270 in cigarette taxes.

The unusually heavy storms toward the end of last year resulted in the sharpest drop in the value of Monterey county crops since 1958.

The crop value dropped 7.5 percent from the previous year, to $824.9 million, according to the county's crop report for 1982.

Heavy rainfall early this year suggests that farmers can't expect an improvement in 1983, when planting has once again been delayed or prevented.

The county report revealed that lettuce is still the county's leading cash crop, despite a $57 million drop in value from a year earlier. The 1982 value of the lettuce crop was $207.8 million.

David Mac Alpine, vice president, has been appointed manager of Crocker Bank's new private capital banking center in Pebble Beach.

Mac Alpine said the center will allow the bank "to provide in one office virtually every financial service required by the affluent individual."

Mac Alpine joined Crocker in 1981 as vice president and manager of Pebble Beach's personal banking office. Previously, he was vice president and manager of the Monterey trust office for Security Pacific Bank.

He is treasurer of the Monterey Peninsula Foundation and a member of the finance committee of the Monterey Peninsula Country Club.

Weston show draws crowd

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

About 300 art lovers and friends of photographer Cole Weston were on hand to open his first local one man show at the Weston Gallery last Friday evening.

The 30-image exhibit drew praise from guests such as photographer Morley Baer and his wife, Frances, Nobert and Linda Roessler, Mel Grimes, Mary Alinder, Edna Bullock, Don Davey and many others.

Family members present to congratulate Cole included ex-wife Maggie, owner of Weston Gallery, his daughter Cara Riddell and her husband Brian, and the couple's daughter Roslyn, and Cole's son Kim Weston, who was with Wendy Buck, and brother Neil Weston and his wife Kraig.

After the champagne reception a family dinner was given at Shanghai-Lo Restaurant in Monterey. The after-an-exhibit-dinner is a Weston family tradition which dates back to Edward Weston, who frequented the restaurant when it was Mr. Chan's.

Cole, who has lived in Garrapata Canyon for many years, is world-traveled and will soon leave for Europe to do a workshop in Arles, France. He will then return to the United States and conduct a workshop in Maine.

Mrs. Johnson was honored for "having served for 25 years as president, program chairman, gourmet cook, guiding light and leader to the Guild membership."

The Johnsons have lived in Carmel Valley for many years and raised their three sons there. They have four granddaughters, the children of Dr. and Mrs. Steven Johnson, who also live in Carmel Valley.

COLE WESTON and his former wife, Maggie Weston, were all smiles at Cole's opening.

DON DAVEY and Betty Barron chatted at the Weston art reception.

Guest speaker for the meeting was Helen Greer, a longtime family friend of the Johnsons, and widow of Dr. George Greer, a retired Methodist minister. Her topic was "Learning to Paint After 50." She also told of her experiences on a painting trip to Italy.

PANHFLLENIC WELCOMES SPRING PARTY

The nice weather arrived right on cue for the 100 or so members and guests who attended the Monterey Bay Alumnae Panhellenic philanthropic fund cocktail social — aptly titled "Panhellenic Welcomes Spring."

The fundraiser for Panhellenic's scholarship fund was at the Pebble Beach home of Mr. and Mrs. Dirk van der Burch. The fund is named in memory of Erma Drujina, a founding member of the local chapter.

The spring theme was carried out with huge bouquets of flowers placed throughout the van der Burch home. Guests were offered a large variety of hot and cold hors d'oeuvres, desserts, coffee and punch.

Local individuals and businesses who donated food included Mrs. Ronald Faia, Aronson's (Pam Aronson), Monte Mart, Carmel Wine and Cheese, Hector De Smet Bakery, Bagel Bakery, Monterey Bay Baking Company, Mrs. John Romano and Mrs. Joanne Carter of Pebble Beach, who has a business in Salinas.

The local chapter is open to all national sorority women.

CARMEL VALLEY WOMEN'S CLUB TO MEET

Members of the Carmel Valley Women's Club will have their May 4 meeting at the Outrigger Restaurant at 12 noon. Cost of the luncheon is $7.

Guest speaker will be Capt. R.E. Overman Jr., a pilot for World Airways who has flown professionally for 20 years. The title of Capt. Overman's talk will be "What Goes On Behind the Locked Cockpit Door."

FORMER CARMEL Police Sgt. Edd Fischer was honored at a retirement party April 11 at La Play. More than 85 friends, family members and government officials were in attendance. Entertainment was provided by Ron Blair. Above, is Fischer (left) with twin brother Bob Fischer, assistant Carmel police chief.

Retirement dinner joins friends of Edd Fischer

Sgt. Edd Fischer, who recently retired from the Carmel Police Department after 25 years of service, was given a retirement dinner April 11 at La Playa.

About 80 of Edd's friends and co-workers attended the event, which can best be described as a group of old friends getting together — a very warm, comfortable feeling.

Awards to Edd for appreciation were received from Congressman Leon Panetta and Assemblyman Sam Farr. Present to give their appreciation gifts and awards were Monterey F.B.I. agent Bob Bunch, Lee Chamberlin of the Carmel Business Association, Carmel Mayor Charlotte Townsend and Marius Crisan, president of the Police Department Employee's Association.

Many other letters of appreciation to Edd were noted.

Sgt. Donald Fuselier emceed the gala and the program was one of fond memories and light-hearted humor.

Guitarist Ron Blair provided entertainment and sang Edd's favorite song, The Sloop John B.

Gifts which Edd received included a bottle of Jim Beam in a police car decanter (circa 1928), a C.B. radio for his R.V. and a personalized retirement badge.

When all the whoopla ended, Edd wound up the festivities with a heartfelt thanks to all as well as to his beloved city of Carmel. He directed a special thanks to Fire Chief Bob Updike and Public Works Superitendent Bill Askew by pointing out his appreciation for the cooperation between the police department and the fire and public works departments.

Now if you're fretting about what Edd is going to do with all his free time — don't! He's going to pack up the R.V. and spend at least one year traveling around the country — with plenty of "gone fishing" time.

Go for it, Edd!

FASHION SHOW HIGHLIGHTS BENEFIT BANQUET

The La Grande Room of the Monterey Holiday Inn was the site for the Spring Fashion Show and Benefit Banquet for the Transcendental Meditation Program of the Monterey Peninsula on Saturday, April 16.

TM supporters had a spectacular view of the Monterey Bay sunset as they enjoyed non-alcoholic wine compliments of Leo McClousky's Empire Vineyard in Felton.

After dinner, Dr. Bert Schuster of San Francisco and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Zeman of San Jose were among the guests who applauded the new spring fashions.

The show's theme, "A New Level of Elegance and Beauty in Haute Couture," brought Sidha Corporation International's unique holistic fashions to the peninsula. The very beautiful collection features natural fabrics. Designers from France, Italy, England and the United States personally supervise every stage of the garment's creation from the printing and finishing of the fabric in the traditional hand silk screen method, to the careful attention to every detail of styling, softness and comfort.

Commentator for the show was Cielle Wright of Carmel. Master of ceremonies for the banquet was Paul Lancaster. Floral arrangements were from Demetrey's Flowers in Salinas.

Coral producing animals are widely distributed throughout the world, but the majority are found in tropical and sub-tropical seas. Skeletons of warm-water corals are the chief component of coral reefs and islands. Delicate, scarlet, precious coral, which has been used for adornment since Roman times occurs chiefly in the Mediterranean and grows like a branching, treelike skeleton. In the same group are a number of other tree corals, as well as the massive blue coral, Heliopora. Still another kind is the Millepora which produces an intricate skeleton resembling intertwined branches.

Carmel volunteers honored by Volunteers in Action

THE RECEPTION hall of the First Presbyterian Church of Monterey was beautifully decorated for the Ninth Annual Recognition Ceremony presented by Volunteers In Action of the Monterey Peninsula April 20.

The theme was carried out on hundreds of balloons with wording on them that read, "Volunteers — Our Greatest Natural Resource." Beautiful bouquets of spring flowers were placed around the room and a large arrangement decorated the buffet table.

Thirty-five awards were presented to various individuals who represented 35 different agencies. These awards were presented by Wane Downey, who is president of the V.I.A. board of directors.

From these 35 people four were selected to receive special silver bowl awards. The committee who chose the four were Frank Bottero, Barbara Bucquet and Mary Rodgers.

Receiving a silver bowl award was Julia Power, who was nominated before her death on April 3 of this year.

Julia joined the Monterey Peninsula Visiting Nurses Association in 1975 and served as treasurer for six years with expertise that proved important to the agency. She also worked with the American Red Cross with the Bloodmobile, and as a bookkeeper and board treasurer, and did fund raising for the Cancer Recovery Program, now the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula.

She served all executive offices of Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services, including that of president. Her award was given to the Visiting Nurses Association.

A silver bowl award was presented to Carmelite Virginia MacLeod who was nominated by Planned Parenthood of Monterey County.

Virginia has served 182.5 hours as a clinic volunteer for Planned Parenthood and has personally assisted more than 1,000 clients. She has served on the board of directors, the executive committee and the fund raising committee. She is head of the hospitality committee for the Planned Parenthood Western Region Conference at Asilomar April 19-22, attended by delegates of 14 states. She is also a patient care volunteer with Hospice and assists people with life-threatening illness, a responsibility she describes as "both humbling and spiritually rewarding."

Asked how she felt about receiving the Silver Bowl Award Virginia said: "It's beautiful and I'm delighted but that's not why I do volunteer work. The real reward is when someone I've helped tells me that it has helped to change their life for the better. It's exciting to know that you can reach out a helping hand to another human being."

Virginia, who has lived in Carmel nine years, has three grown children and one grandchild. "I'm happy that my grandson was a planned child," she said. "Out of the four children I had, only one was planned. That's probably one of the reasons I got into volunteer work with Planned Parenthood."

•

THE TWO other winners of the special silver bowl awards were Lorraine Castanas and Romayne Wetmore. The special awards were presented by Jay Hudson, president of the board of directors of The United Way.

Each year the V.I.A. presents a special Rusty Stratton Award to an outstanding V.I.A. volunteer. This year, the winner was Donald Geisen of Carmel. Geisen, a past president for V.I.A., is the organization's treasurer and finance chairman. He is also chairman of The Human Race, a community Walk-A-Thon fund-raiser scheduled for May 7.

Individuals from more than 50 organizations will participate in the Walk-A-Thon. Each walker campaigns to get sponsors to pledge so much per kilometer walked. The event is a 10 kilometer (6.2 miles) event.

Seventy-five percent of the money raised will go to the individual's favorite organization. The other 25 percent goes to V.I.A.

Jay Hudson's wife, Kip, was the 1982 recipient of the Rusty Stratton Award. She presented this year's award to Geisen.

The awards ceremony was dedicated in memory of Myrtle Youngman, who not only founded V.I.A. but was very active in community events during the past 20 years and was recipient of two Community Service Awards.

After the awards presentation, the 150 members and guests enjoyed a reception. The beautifully decorated buffet table offered a variety of foods, punch and coffee.

Chairwoman for the affair was Rusty Stratton.

Sixteen individuals from Carmel were nominated for the Community Service Awards. The individuals and the organizations which nominated them are: Phyllis Kelley, Tor House Foundation; Linda Wright, Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services; Susan Bromfield, Carmel Unified School District/Carmel Middle School; Ruth E. Lisle, Carmel Bach Festival, Inc.; Reginald Greenburg, Carmel High School; Frances Polk, Alliance on Aging; Julia Power, Monterey Peninsula Visiting Nurses Association; Virginia MacLeod, Planned Parenthood of Monterey County; Phyllis J. Crockett, American Red Cross — Carmel-by-the-Sea Chapter; Annie Holmes, Beverly Manor Convalescent Hospital; Kay Dyer, Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula; William K. McEwen, Sabin-McEwen Learning Institute; Mr. and Mrs. James Leonard (Gert and Jim), Meals on Wheels of the Monterey Peninsula, Inc.; Norma Daberry, The York School; Frank G. Adams, Monterey History and Art Association, Ltd.; and Micky Lawler, Monterey County SPCA.

WITHOUT A DOUBT, the best thing that ever happened as a result of a camel is the camel's hair blazer, from Southwick. The classic lines of Southwick's natural shoulder tailoring, combined with the luxurious softness and rich look of camel hair, have made this jacket a perenial favorite of ours. While Southwick offers a long line of similarly well-bred blazers to choose from, we're one of the relatively few stores in the country that can offer Southwick.

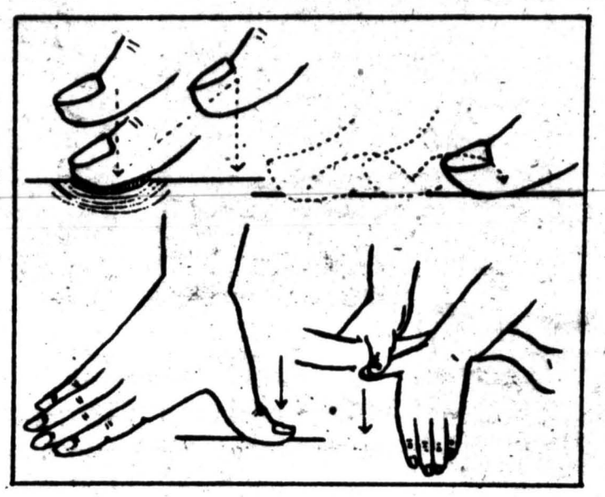
SOU KIE
ACUPRESSURE•WHALPOP•PUHANG
27890 Dorris Drive #7 Carmel (Mid-Valley) 624-2300


SOU KIE means "the hand's energy" and refers to energy transmitted through the hands. In the East it has long been known that physical and mental well-being depend on the quality and flow of "ki" or "chi" energy which we in the West might translate as bio-energy. This energy can be activated or balanced and harmonized by a variety of methods which include acupuncture, acupressure, and other techniques that are less known in the West such as ahmma, whalpop, and puhang.
These therapeutic massage techniques have proven to enhance the vital energy and natural healing power in the body. Thus they give you satisfactory relief and comfort to those who have to complain of low energy, chronic pains, stress and/or tiredness. Our service is especially recommended for women's usual problems, such as stiff backneck, discomfort or pain in the arms and legs, low backache, overweight, nervousness and neurosis. Our service will help much to bring you back to your natural health, full energy and youngness, and everday happiness.

Benefit for the Welches

Fellow thespians and friends of Gina and Larry Welch, whose home was severely damaged by fire last weekend, are dedicating the final performance of No, No, Nanette! at the Wharf Theater next Sunday night (May 1) to the couple.

The performance, which begins at 8 p.m., will be a special benefit with all proceeds to be given to the Welches. They lost their home and most of their furniture and personal possessions to the fire that broke out Saturday night while they were away from the house — Gina giving a performance in the Wharf Theater musical. Both the Welches have been active in theater on the peninsula for many years, and teach in local schools.

Tickets for the special performance are $10. They are on sale at the theater on Fisherman's Wharf, Monterey, or can be purchased before the performance Sunday night.

Father Farrell's wisdom

May love reign

CARMEL ROTARY, LA PLAYA HOTEL

Oh Almighty and Eternal God:

We thank Thee for our homes and we pray that you will bless all who dwell within our family circle. We are grateful for your daily gifts of food, clothing, shelter, for the warmth of mutual affection and for the ties that bind us together. May love reign in every corner of our hearts and in every room of our homes.

An expert says this: "Every man is his own ancestor and every man his own heir. We decide our own future and we inherit our own past."

Finally, an expert is a man who borrows your watch and then tells you what time it is. And he is capable of charging you a salary for being your time-keeper. Amen.

The Golden Years

Economists estimate that, for retirees to maintain their pre-retirement lifestyle with reasonable limits, they require a retirement income equivalent to 60-70 percent of what they were earning immediately before they retired. Unfortunately, though, older Americans can't always reach that ideal. One-seventh of our citizens over age 65 live below the poverty level. This is an improvement over 1970, when one quarter of seniors were below the poverty line, but national efforts will continue to free older citizens from the shadow of economic fear.

School board votes to sell three more properties

ANOTHER MAJOR sale of surplus property could add more than $1 million to the Carmel Unified School District coffers.

The board of education, fresh from an agreement to sell Woods School for $1 million, unanimously voted Tuesday night to sell three surplus sites in Carmel Valley.

Bids for purchase of the property will be opened July 20. Trustees will award the bids July 26. The estimated combined value of the sites is at least $1.1 million.

The district already has received serious inquiries on the 20-acre Scarlett site, which will list at a minimum of $600,000. The site is located at the southerly side of the intersection of Carmel Valley and Scarlett roads.

The property is now being leased to a tree farming operation for $10,000 annually.

A private agricultural company and two individuals have expressed interests in the Scarlett site, district Business Manager Robert Zampatti told the Pine Cone/Outlook April 27.

Zampatti said he could not reveal the names of the individuals or the company.

But he did point out that so far there has been no interest expressed by subdividers, possibly because of the lack of water and the potential restrictions on residential development under consideration in the proposed Carmel Valley Master Plan now under revision.

"So far it dosen't look like they're interested in developing. One is just a guy with a lot of money who wants to use it for his own personal uses," Zampatti said.

The district wants to sell the Scarlett Road site for 33 percent down, two balloon payments of $200,000 each spread over four years, and the balance to be paid at 12 percent interest.

The other two surplus 10 acre sites are: the Holt property on the south side of the Carmel River just off Robinson Canyon Road; and the Metz site on the north side of Carmel Valley Road, about one mile east of Carmel Valley Village.

The minimum price tag on the Holt site is $300,000 while the district is asking at least $200,000 for the Metz property.

The district also has agreed to accept a 25 percent down payment for the Holt and Metz sites with the balance to be paid at 12 percent interest.

The district demanded — and received — a $1 million cash payment for the Woods School site.

However, trustees indicated that the financing on the Carmel Valley properties will attract more buyers and possibly push the price tag higher.

Funds from the sale of surplus school property can only be used for capital improvement projects, such as renovation of the high school campus, under provisions in the state education code.

Trustees plan to use the majority of the Woods School sale proceeds to rebuild the high school campus. Funds from the sale of the Carmel Valley sites will be used for the high school renovation and possibly new roofs at the middle school, according to Zampatti.

In a related matter, trustees reviewed a report on the schedule to rebuild the high school campus.

Architect Fred Keeble is expected to update old maintenance reports from 1979 and make a presentation to trustees in early June.

The board tentatively is to approve the plans in June and the renovation should be completed in September, 1984.

In other action, the board approved a new retention policy that basically gives the principal the final say on whether a student should be held back a grade. Previously, parents could veto a retention.

Trustees also mandated that high school students could only apply 40 units (four, year-long courses) of physical education and 20 units (two, year-long classes) of teacher aide or office aide to graduation. However, the principal can give special permission to students who want more units of teacher or office aide.

The policy was adopted because of concerns that many students were using the classes as an easy route to fulfill graduation requirements. Students must obtain 230 units to graduate.

PAUL PAQUIN, Richard Fritz, Donald Nelson, Supervisor William Peters, Burton Dake, Toni Doyle, Donald Hart, Arnold Millette and Alan Forrest helped launch cable service to the area south of Carmel in groundbreaking ceremonies April 13.

Cable television system goes underground

Monterey Remote (More Cable TV) began underground and aerial construction in the Carmel Highlands area Wednesday, April 13. In attendance at the formal groundbreaking ceremony at the top of Corona Road, Carmel Highlands, were Supervisor William Peters; Donald R. Nelson, Richard Fritz, and Donald M. Hart from the National Bank of Carmel; Burton Dake, Carmel Highlands; Toni Doyle representing the Highlands Inn; Alan Forrest, Paul Paquin, Bill Bates and Arnold Millette from More Cable TV.

Local, bay area and satellite programs will be carried by microwave signal for reception on all channels for residents in the Highlands Inn area south to Otter Cove. Construction will proceed in five phases. The starting point for phase one will be in the Highlands Inn and Tickle Pink area.

The system will cost an estimated $250,000. Financial assistance is being provided by the National Bank of Carmel. The system will feature interactive cable TV service and will have the capacity for home security and computer interface in the future.

The programming lineup, tailored to local interest, includes movie channels, sports networks, educational and college credit offerings, cable news, cultural, women's and religious shows. Included are Home Box Office, (HBO), CNN, ESPN, USA, Disney and Art/Daytime. Also included will be four channels of FM stereo radio, along with Reuts' news and financial information.

Cable will be installed underground where possible, but because of unknown water and sewer line positions this may not be possible at all locations, company spokesmen said.

Highland residents can sign up for pre-installation discounts until June 1. More Cable TV has new offices at its construction facility at 2511-B Garden Rd. in Monterey.

Pebble Beach race:

Equestrians to battle for coveted gold cup

The 25th annual Los Altos Hunt Spring Race Meet will begin at 11 a.m. Saturday, April 30 at the Equestrian Center in Pebble Beach.

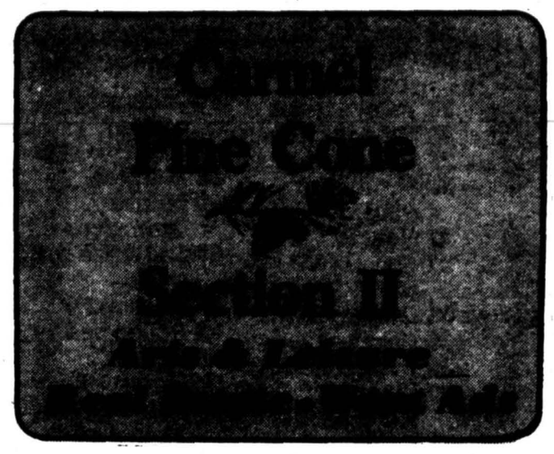
There will also be a "Birdrock Barbecue" at 12 noon at Birdrock on the 17 Mile Drive in Pebble Beach to which the public is invited.

About 50 horse and rider combinations which represent the West Hills Hunt of Los Angeles, Santa Ynez Hunt of Santa Barbara and Los Altos Hunt of Northern California, will run in various events which include the Hill Topper Point-to-Point and the Del Monte Forest Point-to-Point between the Equestrian Center and the Bird Rock course on the 17 Mile Drive.

The highlight of the race is the famous Spyglass Hill Steeplechase for the Del Monte Gold Cup. This is the final race of the day and is a gentlemen's race over about three and one-half miles of brush and timber fences.

"Permanent possession of the valuable Gold Cup is maintained by Pebble Beach Corporation but the winner of the race is awarded a replica," said the director of the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center, Abby Foss.

For reservations to the barbecue, catered by the Beach Club, phone the Equestrian Center at 624-2756. The public is invited to attend the races and the lunch. There will be a $4 gate fee at the entrance to Del Monte Forest at the Hill Gate, off highway 1 between Monterey and Carmel.



Take a walk through history during Monterey Adobe tour

THE 36TH ANNUAL Adobe Tour sponsored by the Monterey History and Art Association is scheduled from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, April 30, in Monterey.

There will be 22 adobes on the tour as well as other buildings and points of interest. This year's theme, Children of the Adobes, Heritage and Promise was designed to encourage the participation of young people in Monterey.

Local fourth graders have been invited to compete in writing, music and visual arts such as stories and essays of the era, scale models of adobes of the early 1800s, quilting, choral singing to music of the era, murals and other art forms.

The Sloat Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution will judge the entries and will award prizes in each category. To celebrate children's participation in the tour, a children's pageant will be given before the start of the tour between 9 a.m. and 10 a.m. at Pacific Street between Scott and Jackson in Monterey.

The pageant will proceed to Colton Hall where it will end at maypoles set up on the lawn. There the children will perform as did the children of the 1800s and on into the 1900s.

Because the adobe tour is self-guided, participants can proceed at their own pace. A map is on each ticket and in the brochure provided each guest. Tickets are $5 for adults and $3 for students and enlisted military personnel. Tickets for children under 12 years of age, when accompanied by an adult, are $1. The ticket price also includes tea at Casa Serrano, 412 Pacific St., Monterey, which will be served from 10 a.m. to 12 noon and from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m.

There will also be an al fresco lunch prepared and served by the Junior League of Monterey County from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the Whaling Station, located between Pacific Street and the Custom House Plaza at Happy 20th anniversary, Hidden Valley!

By LISA McKANEY

THE LINCOLN Center Brass Quintet is scheduled to perform at 8 p.m. Sunday, May 1 in the Carmel Mission Basilica, located off Highway 1 at Rio Road in Carmel, as part of the Hidden Valley Music Seminars' 20th anniversary celebration.

It is the quintet's first West Coast appearance. The group is composed of principal players from the New York Philharmonic and the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra. The players are Philip Myers on the French horn, Warren Deck on the tuba, Mark Gould on the trumpet, Edward Carroll on the trumpet and David Langlitz on the trombone.

The repertoire for the concert includes Fancies, Toys and Dreams by Giles Faraby, a quintet by Victor Ewald, Spain for solo horn by Vladimir Buyanovsky, a suite by William Boyce, Sequenza V for solo trombone by Luciano Berio, Music for Brass Instruments by Ingolf Dahl and Contrapunctus I, III, IX by J.S. Bach.

Tickets for the concert are $12 per person and patron's tickets are available at $50 per person (of which $38 is tax-deductible). Tickets are available at Countrywide Crafts in the Barnyard and How to Do Anything Bookstore, Lobos Lodge Court in Carmel; at the Record Cove in Monterey and at Lily Walker Records in Pacific Grove.

The concert itself marks the conclusion of a weekend of festivities primarily centered at Hidden Valley.

"As part of the celebration we plan to have an Old Friends dinner this weekend for people involved in the development of Hidden Valley in a significant way — as a way of saying thank you for their support," Peter Meckel, founder and general director of Hidden Valley, said.

"The significance of this time is the fact that it's been a milestone for us; a time we can stop and reflect on where we've been, reevaluate where we plan to go and find out why we do what we're doing," he said.

In the first 20 years as an institute of the arts, Hidden Valley has undergone great accomplishments and great struggle. "We are now in a position to heal wounds and gather the family of our organization together," Meckel added.

"This year is the most significant year in that it's been the most programmatic year in our history; we've had more new masters classes, new works have been created and our dance program has expanded. Our plans for the opera season next year are going so well it indicates organizational maturity, which is very important in my opinion," he explained.

•

MECKEL'S personal vision is that Hidden Valley will grow in the quality of programs and not necessarily the size, remain at its location in Carmel Valley and increase the

Film review:

A deliciously nutsy comedy

By LISA JENSEN

Local Hero. With Burt Lancaster and Peter Reigert. Written and directed by Bill Forsyth. A Warner Brothers release. Rated PG.

THE FILMS OF Bill Forsyth have such a fresh, looney perspective. His last effort, Gregory's Girl, a tale of teenage romance on a co-ed soccer team, had a unique, daffy charm in its small-town, Scotland setting and the innocence of the subject.

In his new film, Local Hero, Forsyth grapples with international oil interests, environmental irresponsibility and innate human greed and comes up with another delightful comedy.

The action begins in Houston, home base for the worldwide mega-conglomerate Knox Oil and Gas. Knox has discovered an oil-rich strip of coastline beneath a tiny fishing village on the northern tip of Scotland where they want to built a huge refinery.

Brash junior executive "Mac" MacIntyre (Peter Reigert), who's made a name for himself in the company's "Mergers and Acquisitions" department, is dispatched to the village of Ferness to buy the land from its rustic inhabitants.

Before he leaves Houston, Mac is ushered into the celestial, space-tech offices of Knox president Felix Happer (Burt Lancaster). A cheerfully eccentric (if not entirely deranged) astronomy buff obsessed with discovering a comet to name after himself, Happer cryptically instructs the bewildered Mac to report anything unusual he sees in the Scottish skies.

Things get even weirder when Mac arrives in Ferness. Beneath their stoic, salt-of-the-earth exteriors, the canny villagers can't wait to get their paws on their fair share of Knox's billions. Their spokesman, wily innkeeper Gordon Urquhart (Denis Lawson), negotiates for the most advantageous deal while the locals lounge in the cobbled streets discussing the relative merits of Maseratis and Lamborghinis.

Meanwhile, Mac's assistant, a city-bred young Scot named Danny (Peter Capaldi), wanders off to pursue a sexy, skin-diving marine biologist (Jenney Seagrove) who wants to preserve the area for wilderness study. Mac himself slowly falls so deeply under the spell of Ferness' rugged, wild beauty that he starts to feel a twinge of guilt about the whole business. Just when the negotiations are about to bear fruit, they run aground. Ben (Fulton MacKay), an old scavenger who owns four miles of beach where he lives in a tumbledown shack and plies his trade, has no intention of selling out.

Working for the first time with "name" actors and major studio financing, Forsyth has lost none of his antic sense of the absurd. Local Hero never goes for big guffaws, but every single line of dialogue and bit of incidental visual business is good for a chuckle, adding up to a consistently rich and funny movie.

Forsyth deftly satirizes corporate megalomania and the corrupting influence of Big Money (two Ferness old-timers bemoaning the fate of the land their families have inhabited for generations console themselves discussing stock options and capital gains on their forthcoming millions). But the tone is so benign and the resolutions so serendipitous, the film has the magical feel of an updated Brigadoon.

The story is populated with dozens of marvelous characters as unique and recognizably human as they are hilarious. Reigert is engaging as Mac, gradually giving up his three-piece suit and electronic briefcase to go discreetly native. Lawson is priceless as wry, deadpan Gordon (he and Reigert have a terrific drunk scene together) who's always ready for a quick roll in the hay with his vivacious wife, Stella (Jennifer Black).

Also on hand are a black priest named MacPherson, a Soviet fisherman who puts in to Ferness every few months to deliver gifts of vodka, check up on his western stock investments (placed through Gordon) and sing sentimental American country ballads at the pub, and a rainbow-haired punk-ette in leather and chains.

Her boyfriend, the drummer in the town's one teen band, is played by Gregory's Girl star, Gordon John Sinclair. Forsythe has a wonderfully tolerant attitude towards all these idiosyncratic characters and his benevolence even extends to the serenely spaced-out Happer, riotously played by Lancaster more as blissful holy fool than corporate ogre.

Forsythe also displays a keen sense of geographical rhythms, from the pulsating opening shots of rush hour on the Houston freeways as a radio DJ bleats "Keep movin', Texas!" to the ambling serenity of Ferness where time seems to stand still.

The contrast between these two cultures is presented as less a clash than a series of subtle, elliptical encounters, often expressed in moments as beautifully simple as a shot of Mac wordlessly laying out his Ferness sea shells on his hi-tech kitchen counter in Houston, or as dazzling as the meteor showers and Northern Lights that often light up the Ferness skies. (Chris Menges' cinematography is unobtrusively gorgeous throughout.) Handsomely crafted and full of fun, Local Hero is the most deliciously nutsy comedy to come along this year.

Theater review

Likeable, funny--at times

By SHIRLEEN HOLT

The Cherry Foundation's latest production — Jules Feiffer's Hold Me — is a product of the 1970s "Me Generation."

If topics like neuroses, anxiety, insecurity, self-analysis, analysis of others, analysis of self relating to others — ad nausuem — are what you enjoy, Hold Me is the play to see.

Like his popular comic strip writing, Feiffer's theatrical venture explores modern life through Woody Allen-type glasses but without the endearing humor and likeability of Allen's works.

Not to say that the play is neither likeable nor funny. It is both at times. But more often than not, the audience is reminded of the problems we face living in a society where we must create conflict if we don't have enough already, where simplicity and happiness have somehow disappeared leaving us to grope for the elusive "truth."

The play is a series of short skits in which characters change faster than the second hand on an analyst's watch. They are too numerous and too similar to mention singularly, but each presents his or her own mundane catastrophe in a variety of ways.

The play is masterfully directed by Carey Crockett, who avoids stagnant and repetitious staging. The pacing is brisk and the versatile set is fully employed. Crockett has this piece polished and there was no evidence of opening night roughness.

Mark Shuler gives a fine performance, though his characters could be more distinctive. Still, Shuler has a wide, energetic and emotional range.

Marjorie Eldridge Wesner adds a believeable and sensitive touch to the play, and Diana Johnson fares beautifully in the play's simple comic moments.

Ieva Audjes as the Dancer is a kind of one-woman chorus, intertwining people and events. Her choreography is beautiful but her character interpretation could use more imagination and variety.

Robert Colter is delightful as he presents each new character. Colter has a wonderful grasp of the personalities he portrays: he is sensitive without taking himself too seriously and funny without being too broad. He brings out the light, unique side of each individual.

The play's best moments are exhibited in Feiffer's simple humor. Quick, silly bits provide the necessary relief from the never-ending onslaught of troubled individuals.

Mention should be given to the technical aspects of the production. Lance Jacobson's lighting is at times too dark and the angles too sharp, casting severe shadows on the faces of the performers. However, the set, designed by Carey Crockett, Robert Colter and Diana Johnson, is imaginative and well done. The costumes could use more unity and thought to blend with the style of the piece.

Film Gallery presents a French film

The Film Gallery of Monterey Peninsula College will present King of Hearts at 8 p.m. Friday, April 29 in the theater at Monterey Peninsula College, 980 Fremont St., Monterey.

The 1967 film is in French with English subtitles. It features Alan Bates and Genevieve Bujold in a story about a Scottish soldier who is sent to disarm a World War I bomb in a small French town.

Upon his arrival, he finds the town deserted except for the inmates of the local insane asylum who embrace him as their king, with farcical results. General admission is $2 at the door.

Kay Kyser presents free lecture

The "old professor," James K. Kyser, will speak at 12:15 p.m. Thursday, May 5 in the auditorium at Sunset Center in Carmel.

The lecture is free and open to the public; free child care will be provided. Claim the Kingdom of God Within You — It's Yours is the title of the lecture sponsored by First Church of Christ, Scientist, Carmel.

Kyser gave up a promising film career as well as his top-rated radio program, the popular Kollege of Musical Knowledge, in 1951 and returned to his home in Chapel Hill, N.C. and pursued his interest in Christian Science.

Three years later, he entered the healing ministry of Christian Science as a full time practitioner.

Good reasons to support art

By RICHARD TYLER

WHY BOTHER with the arts?

There are three reasons worth considering. First, the arts can help people make good use of their leisure time — a goal that is shared by all of us to some degree. Art can add to the array of the services the city provides and can broaden their constituency by attracting to their facilities people who might not otherwise come.

Second, there is a strong and growing demand for the arts on the part of the existing constituency. A recent Louis Harris poll showed, for example, that people's participation in such activities as photography, dance, and music increased by as much as three times between 1975 and 1980.

In fact, nearly 90 percent of those interviewed thought that arts and cultural activities along with recreational activities are as important for a community to have as libraries, schools and parks.

The third basic reason for considering the arts is that they help bring tangible benefits to a community. Quality of life, to which the arts contribute greatly, is an important factor in the location of business.

The arts industry — the collection of institutions and projects that involve the arts — brings jobs and spending to local economies. The arts can also play an important role in revitalization and can serve as a tourist attraction to bring in people and revenues from other areas.

These arguments, with slight modification, also suggest why the arts should make an effort to be involved in recreational activities. Such involvement not only helps us fulfill many of our goals but also keeps us responsive to the needs of the community we serve. There are practical reasons as well:

- Community and cultural departments have space, facilities, equipment, and personnel that can be made available for these needs.
- Leisure activities are where many of the people in our communities — potential audiences — can be found.
- These departments can provide an introduction to other parts of the municipal government.
- The interaction of community activities can have a positive impact on funding by improving our statistics (attendance, events, earned income) and by broadening our base of cooperative connections with outside institutes.

There are problems, of course. The specifics of what we do must be in keeping with our missions and high standards of artistic quality. But within that framework, there is much that may be possible — a joint festival, for example, or an exchange between artists and facility personnel of teaching time in return for exhibition opportunities.

The city of Carmel does give other institutes an opportunity to display their crafts and art works; leisure time organizations as well as programs at the schools have taken advantage of this cooperation. The city also sponsors performances of these organizations that are made available to the residents at no admission price.

There are a number of craft exhibits and performances in which the entire area is invited to participate and as the demand for this sort of activity broadens, the Carmel Community and Cultural Commission as well as the department makes every effort to schedule such events.

As we are all too painfully aware, this is a time of diminished expectations and reduced funding and we must form as many alliances as we can to make our impact greater. As we have in the past, we shall have to continue to explore every opportunity, every possibility, for the sake of the people we serve.

If there are programs to expand, we shall do that; if there are new areas to fulfill, we can do that. It is incentive enough for all of us to take a closer look at the potential this growing and broadening area offers our creativity.

I Cantori scores win over mediocrity

By SCOTT MACCLELLAND

A CENTURY and a half ago in Germany, Robert Schumann battled the "Philistines of art" with his Society of David and his magazine Neue Zeitschrift fur Musik. The battle no doubt will rage eternal, but Sunday night at the Carmel Mission I Cantori di Carmel scored a decisive victory over musical Philistinism — mediocrity.

The most frustrating thing about local performing organizations remains mediocrity, and there can be no doubt that it starts at the top where artistic leadership expects it. Despite the talents and abilities of its constitutents, mediocre expectations invariably produce mediocre results.

The sell-out audience at Sunday's concert expected quality because the reputation of Sal Ferrantelli, I Cantori's leader, has flowered, with scarcely a faltering step, to standards only seen during the summer Bach Festival.

It should be no surprise though. For years, Priscilla Salgo has turned local amateur singers into the Bach Festival Chorus, an ensemble which has proved that our community has more than enough raw material for high quality expectations.

Ferrantelli's techniques for getting good results include caution. The Cantori's previous concerts in Pacific Grove may be viewed as a shakedown in anticipation of this one, their debut in the town whose name they carry. There's wisdom here. The Cantori, at a complement of 53 voices, have arrived at an ideal balance of flexibility and sonority. Their confidence and their purpose are clearer than they've ever been.

For this concert an orchestra, consisting of 10 strings and organ, plus trumpet and oboe for particular movements, joined the chorus. Ferrantelli showed fine skill in balancing the one group with the other though more strings would have been welcome.

The programming itself, consisting of an organ mass by Haydn, a motet by Bach and the Gloria in D by Vivaldi, deserves praise. It unfolded in the right direction, could be seen to challenge the singers, and clearly gave nourishment to audience and chorus alike.

The Vivaldi Gloria that closed the program achieved the most excitement as Ferrantelli fairly danced high energy into it. The fast movements sizzled with a brilliance typically found in smaller professional choirs.

The articulations, the etching of the different voicings, and the tone production surpassed even many of the Bach Festival programs in the Basilica of the Mission. In the second movement, Et in terra pax, the chorus sonorities swelled to a palpable richness of singular distinction.

In fine voice, and similarly caught by Ferrantelli's infectious spirit, were soprano Caterina Michieli and mezzo Linda Purdy, together for the bouncey Laudamus te, and in solos otherwise. The Domine Deus, with Miss Micieli paired with the oboe of Chris Rafael and pizzicato low strings, gave Ferrantelli another moment to design and exhibit a subtle but clear touch with dynamics. Baroque trumpet, played by Brian Anderson, sparkled with unflagging accuracy in the opening and closing movements. In all, it was a splending reading.

The opening Haydn Missa brevis in B-flat (St. John of God) showed off immediately the Cantori's newly assured confidence with declamation, articulation and dynamics. These features gave the piece a bigger and more sophisticated character than expected, although the work is not as slight in content as its brevity tends to suggest.

From the outset the tone of the voices poured forth with deep and steady support. Accuracy of pitch was never in doubt except at the exposed entry of the men's voices at the start of the Agnus Dei.

Soprano Micieli gave the solo Benedictus an assured and poised reading despite missing the first note only when her platform tilted, which forced her to step quickly to safety. The choral lines in the closing movement stood out in clear relief.

The only letdown of the program was a loss of urgency in the middle of the Bach motet Singet dem Herrn ein neues Lied, and this is a slight complaint. The Cantori displayed both lyricism and rich texture in a work whose greatest challenge is to bring those features into reconciliation and realization successfully. The closing fugue of the work was thrilling and vividly clear.

The instrumentalists, headed by concert master David Dally, were local and imported players who matched the occasion with skill and solid support. At the organ was Camille Olaeta.

There remains no question of the Cantori's ascent. The are this town's finest non-Bach Festival choir in years, and that is intended as a high compliment. Bravo.

The joys of reading to your children

By JEAN THURMAN

The Read-Aloud Handbook by Jim Trelease. (Penguin Books, $5.95 paperback; 223 pages.)

READING ALOUD to your children and encouraging them to read to themselves are two of the most beneficial things parents and teachers can do for kids. In The Read-Aloud Handbook, Jim Trelease extols the joys of reading aloud and gives a rundown of how and what to read.

He strongly recommends cutting down on television time and replacing it with time "to read aloud, to read to ourselves, to do homework at an unhurried pace, to learn how to play chess and checkers and Scrabble, to make the plastic models that have been collecting dust in the closet for two years, to bake cakes and cookies, to draw and paint and color, and — best of all — to talk with each other, ask questions and answer questions."

According to Ruth Love, superintendent of Chicago Public Schools: "If we could get our parents to read to their preschool children 15 minutes a day, we could revolutionize the schools." A child's attitude toward books is a direct result of his or her parents' and teachers' attitudes. If the parents and teachers read themselves, read to their children and provide plenty of reading material, then the children will learn to love books as well.

Reading expands a child's vocabulary, imagination, and comprehension. Through books a child can learn about other cultures, other times, and other ways of thinking. A school must give a child not only the ability to read, but the desire to read.

The Read-Aloud Handbook is aimed at both parents and teachers. Jim Trelease gives solid advice on what books to read, how and when to read them, and how to build a home library. He tells you how to start reading to an infant or a sixth grader who has never been exposed to stories.

He tells you how to use and support your public and school library, your local bookstore, and gives some alternative ways to obtain books. Look in your Salvation Army thrift shop, or the library discard sale, or participate in the school book club if your school offers one.

Provide you children with all kinds of reading material. The author points out that when you read the newspaper you don't just read the news stories and editorials, you also read the features, the advice columns, and the comics.

A child needs light reading material with the serious stuff too. No child will enjoy reading if all he or she reads is textbooks. Comic books may not be high literature, but they certainly encourage reading, as do children's magazines.

When you read aloud to the child, though, you should choose books that challenge a little. Pick something that you enjoy and feel confident your child will enjoy, "books that will stimulate children's emotions, minds, and imaginations, stories that will serve as a harbor light toward which a child can navigate."

•

ALMOST HALF the book is taken up by a Treasury of Read-Alouds, an annotated list of books that make good listening. Not every good book makes a good read-aloud. You must look for certain other qualities besides literary merit.

Jim Trelease lists these qualities: a fast pace, clear, rounded characters, a miniumum of long descriptive passages, and crisp, easy-to-read dialogue. He gives examples of each of these characteristics.

Just browsing through his list of books is a pleasure for anyone who was read to as a child. Many of the books listed have been around for at least a generation, and you might recall with pleasure Else Minarik's Little Bear series, Ludwig Bemelman's Madeline books, Virginia Lee Burton's Mike Mulligan and His Steam Shovel, and of course, Dr. Seuss.

The treasury is broken up into wordless books, picture books, short novels, novels, poetry, and anthologies. There are more than 300 entries, which is quite a selection, but by no means does it cover all that is available. Trelease includes a disclaimer at the beginning of the treasury in which he says he probably left out your all-time favorite, but he managed to include all of mine.

The book also includes some wonderful photographs of children being read to, and a bibliography of additional works on children's literature to which an interested parent or teacher could refer.

This is an excellent resource and guide, and truly an inspiration to bewildered parents and teachers who wonder how they can help their kids.

EDITORIAL: SAVE WHEAT

Wheat saving is America's most vital food problem. The United States Food Administration, in view of the critical wheat shortage, asks every Californian to observe the following amended rules:

Make every day and every meal a "wheatless" meal. Eat no food of any kind containing wheat or wheat products unless absolutely necessary for health. Substitute fresh and cured meats of all kinds, potatoes, fresh vegetables, fruits, dairy products and other cereals, such as corn and rice.

The "meatless" and "porkless" days have been suspended. There are now no restrictions on the consumption of any particular foods, except wheat. The government urges, however, that no food of any kind be wasted.

Without sufficient wheat to feed our armies and those of the allies, we cannot hope for victory.

PRESIDENT'S DAY PLANS COVER THE ENTIRE PENINSULA

Plans for Monterey Peninsula's President's Day observance ceremonies to be held at the Monterey Ball Park, are going ahead rapidly, following last Thursday evening's meeting of the "Support Roosevelt Club" at Bill Sorenson's store in New Monterey.

The club, organized recently by Sorensen, has more than 300 members to date, and is exciting tremendous enthusiasm throughout the peninsula. It is non-partisan in character and upholds the finest American principles of loyalty and united action, regardless of personal feeling.

At Thursday's meeting a number of committees were appointed to take action for the local celebration. These committees will meet again Thursday night at the Monterey Chamber of Commerce to carry plans to a definite conclusion.

Committees were appointed to promote the plan among civic, church, school and other organizations over the entire Monterey peninsula.

NORBERG WILL PROPOSE ART AND FOREST COMMISSIONS TO CITY COUNCIL WEDNESDAY

Councilman Gunnar Norberg would like to see writers, artists, persons interested in art, music, drama and the preservation of the Carmel forest in the audience when the city council meets Wednesday night in city hall at 7:45 p.m.

He will propose that the city council establish two new commissions, art and forest. The arts commission of nine or more, appointed by the council, should be made up of painters, musicians, actors, directors, producers, also interested individuals with executive ability and talent for organization and public relations, he thinks.

Purpose of the arts commission? "I'd like to see more of the Forest Theater and the beach for drama, music, festivals and pageants. I'd like to see a Carmel Opera Festival established. I think someone should find out about the festival in Florence, Italy."

The arts commission should not dictate to or interfere with the independent activity of the various groups but stimulate interest and support. And it could well act as liaison agent among them, he thinks.

HIDDEN HILLS DEVELOPER PLEADS FOR WATER

The president of Standard International Corp., which intends to develop the remainder of the 2,000-acre Hidden Hills subdivision, told a PUC hearing yesterday his firm was "pleading for our lives" in seeking Cal-Am water for the development.

Daniel Hogan of Andover, Mass., declared that in three years of conversations with water company officials, no one had ever indicated any doubts about the availability of ample water to serve the area.

He quoted a letter written in December, 1970 by David Fiscus, then Monterey division manager for Cal-Am, which asserted that Cal-Am had adequate water to serve all lots in Hidden Hills and had always considered the development a natural extension of its service area.

Hogan went on to discuss the amount of water consumed by golf courses on the Monterey Peninsula, saying it takes 500,000 gallons of water to sprinkle an 18-hole golf course all day.

"The water used on one golf course would supply all the residents of Hidden Hills and Tierra Grande on an annual basis." Hogan said that there "doesn't seem to be any attention to putting in a conservation program" for water on the peninsula, such as restricting its use for lawns for brief periods.

Hogan said that Standard International has spent $250,000 in plans for Hidden Hills, and will have spent $100,000 in preparation for the PUC hearings.

"JUNK FOOD" PULLED FROM HIGH SCHOOL CAFETERIA

JUNK FOOD junkies, beware! The Carmel Unified School District Board of Trustees voted 4-0 Tuesday to ban all "non-nutritious" and highly sugared food from meal offerings at district schools. The ban starts next Monday and will continue through the remainder of the school year.

Supt. Harris Taylor told the trustees the policy may become permanent because changes in federal regulations are expected that would cut off funds to districts that serve junk food.

Trustees also asked for an investigation of further menu changes, which would include substituting more nutritious food for that already served in district cafeterias and snack bars.

The Carmel district had eliminated many of the "junk food" items from the high school and middle school snack bars before Tuesday. The high school snack bar, however, will now eliminate the remaining high-sugar candy and pastries. Business Manager Walter Hinton told the trustees cookies will be replaced when more nutritious ones can be found.

To be eliminated from the middle school snack bar are the pastries, corn chips, cheese puffs and ice cream. No candy was available there.

Backgammon

Always look ahead

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

You, White, roll 6-3 in the diagrammed position. How do you play it?

You'll probably land on your feet no matter how you take this roll, but there's no harm in looking ahead to avoid being endangered by a high doublet at your next turn.

Suppose you move from your midpoint to your 4-point. You'll then be safe if your next roll is 6-6 or 4-4, but you'll be in trouble if your next roll is 5-5. You must come in from the 11-point to the 6-point and must bring two men in from the bar point to your 2-point. Now you must take your fourth five by bearing a man off the 5-point. This leaves a blot on your 5-point, and if Black hits the blot he can double, and you'll probably have to resign.

Your next roll will provide no problem if you bring the man on your midpoint down to your barpoint for the six and then move from the 11-point to the 8-point for your three. You can handle any big doublet without leaving a blot. You can't be sure of permanently staying out of trouble, but you'd like to avoid leaving a blot until Black has begun to break up his board.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way when you send $1 plus a stamped, self-addressed, No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

BEHIND THE OLD MISSION

THE TRIO BEIJAFLOR will perform at various historic sites during the 39th annual Adobe Tour scheduled from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, April 30. Sponsored by the Monterey History and Art Association, the tour has a theme of Children of the Adobes, Heritage and Promise. For more information, phone 372-2608.

Monterey Adobe tour offers more than just old buildings

Residents of Monterey, for the most part, will be in Spanish or early American costumes. Participants will follow the path of history, well-marked by a red line which winds through an historic route which leads to the adobes and other notable landmarks of California's first capital city.

They will be accompanied by the diversified music of Guy Horn and His Trio Beijaflor, made up of himself, Nina Harrison and Lucy Horn. They will play music from Bach to Brazilian folk songs and from Hungarian gypsy tunes to Beethoven sonatas.

•

OTHER DEMONSTRATIONS of interest on the day of the tour include an exhibition of vintage photographs which depict the children of the adobes at Colton Hall located on Pacific between Jefferson and Madison; a collection of antique dolls from Monterey in the 1800s at the House of the Four Winds, 540 Calle Principal, Monterey and a Textile Arts Fair, Patterns for Posterity in the Friendship Room of the House of Four Winds, so named because it was the only house in Monterey with a weather vane on its roof.

It was built by Thomas O. Larkin during the 1830s and has the distinction of being the first Hall of Records in the newly-formed State of California.

Patterns for Posterity will feature textile arts and a collection of children's clothing, including a few things worn by their mothers.

The oldest piece on exhibit is a small, unfinished sampler which was found wadded up in an old trunk. When it was washed, what had appeared to be a brown stain turned out to be the initials E.R. and the date 1823.

Another item on exhibit is a child's christening gown which Jeanne Graham, curator of costumes for Monterey History and Art Association, thinks may have been work by Amelia Cooper, who was born in 1844 and later became the bride of Eusubio Molera.

The textile arts exhibit will consist of live demonstrations of the kinds of handiwork done by the first American women who came to Monterey in the early 1800s and who passed their skills on to their children.

Co-sponsors of the fair are members of the Carmel Craft Guild, Spinners and Weavers, Monterey Peninsula Chapter of the Embroiderers Guild of America and the Monterey Peninsula Quilters Guild.

The buildings on the tour are: the Custom House at the entrance to Fisherman's Wharf (where tickets may be obtained); Pacific Building and Memory Garden, Scott and Oliver; Casa del Oro, Scott and Oliver; Old Whaling Station, Heritage Harbor; Francis Doud House, 177 Van Buren; Mayo Hayes O'Donnell Library, 155 Van Buren; Perry House, 201 Van Buren; First Theater, Pacific and Scott; Casa Soberanes, 336 Pacific (where tickets may be obtained); Casa Serrano, 412 Pacific (where tickets may be obtained) and Colton Hall and the Old Jail at Pacific between Jefferson and Madison.

Also on the tour are Underwood-Brown, Pacific and Madison; Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, 559 Pacific; Larkin House and Sherman-Haller Adobe, 510 Calle Principal (where tickets may be obtained); House of the Four Winds; Allen Knight Maritime Museum, 550 Calle Principal (where tickets may be obtained); Casa Amesti, 516 Polk (where tickets may be obtained); Cooper-Molera Adobe, Polk and Munras; Gabriel de la Torre Adobe, Hartnell and Polk; General Fremont Headquarters, 539 Hartnell; Stevenson House, 530 Houston and Casa Abrego, 592 Abrego (where tickets are available.)

Pianist will perform classic pieces at Sunset Theater

Anthony di Bonaventura, pianist, is to perform the Piano Concerto No. 23 in A Major, K. 488 by Mozart with the Monterey County Symphony, at 8 p.m., Sunday, May 1 in King Hall at the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey and at 8 p.m. Monday, May 2 at the Sunset Theater in Carmel.

The concert will also feature Overture to the Magic Flute by Mozart and Symphony No. 5 in E minor by Tchaikovsky.

Anthony di Bonaventura has performed in 22 countries and appeared with such major orchestras as the Philadelphia Orchestra, the New York Philharmonic, the Chicago Symphony and the Vienna Symphony, as well as participation in the festivals of Spoleto and Lucca in Italy, Bergen in Norway and Zagreb in Yugoslavia.

On his second tour of Australia and New Zealand, he was the soloist for the concerts which opened the famed Sydney Opera House.

Di Bonaventura's stature in the music world as an interpreter of Mozart began with his debut at an early age in Washington, D.C. as a prodigy. He started piano studies at the age of three, gave his first professional concert at the age of four, won a scholarship to New York's Music School Settlement at six and appeared as soloist with the New York Philharmonic at the age of 13.

At the age of 16 he became the pupil of the celebrated Russian teacher, Madame Isabelle Vengerova and later graduated with highest honors from Curtis Institute. He is now professor of music and chairman of the piano department at the School for the Arts of Boston University.

He is also director of the Young Artists Piano Program at Tanglewood and founder-director of the Piano Institute at Colby College in Maine.

Di Bonaventura chose the Avery Tompkins Memorial Concert grand piano used by the Monterey County Symphony. At the time of Mrs. Tompkins' gift to the Symphony, di Bonaventura was in New York and offered his expertise in choosing the best possible instrument for the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra's use.

Tickets for the Monterey concert on Sunday, May 1 are on sale at Lily Walker's Music in Pacific Grove, at the Record Cove in Monterey, at the Recreation department of the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey and at the box office, which opens at 7 p.m. on the night of the concert.

A LITTLE rain failed to dampen the enthusiasm of parents and relatives who braved the inclement weather to watch opening ceremonies of the Carmel Youth Baseball season. Above, Sandra Shoemaker foreground) and Tim Connell photographed a group of relatives. Five of their cousins participate on Youth Baseball teams.

Season openers washed out:

Mother Nature tosses no-hit shutout win over Youth Baseball

BILL WOOLSEY, who started Carmel Little League (now Youth Baseball) 25 years ago, threw out the ceremonial first pitch of the hardball season in a drizzling rain storm last Saturday. Saturday's games will be rescheduled later in the season. Team photographs will also be rescheduled.

Life at the hot corner:

The grooming of a Brooks Robinson

MOST OF THE opening-day festivities for the Carmel Valley Little League were postponed when rain fell Saturday, but that did not stop third baseman Matt Murphy and his minor league Kurz Instruments' Pirates team from participating in an early morning game.

YOUNG MATT was probably the most active of the Pirates, though the baseball rarely came his way. Here, he takes a between-pitch spin.

Photos by Joe Livernois

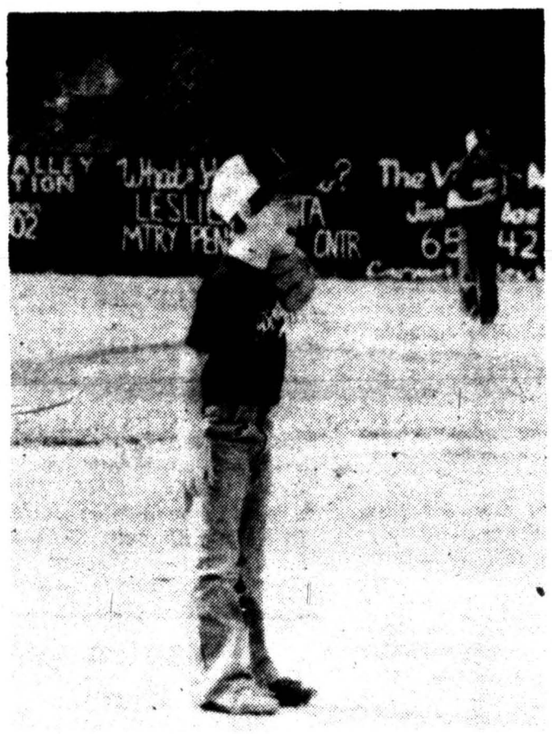
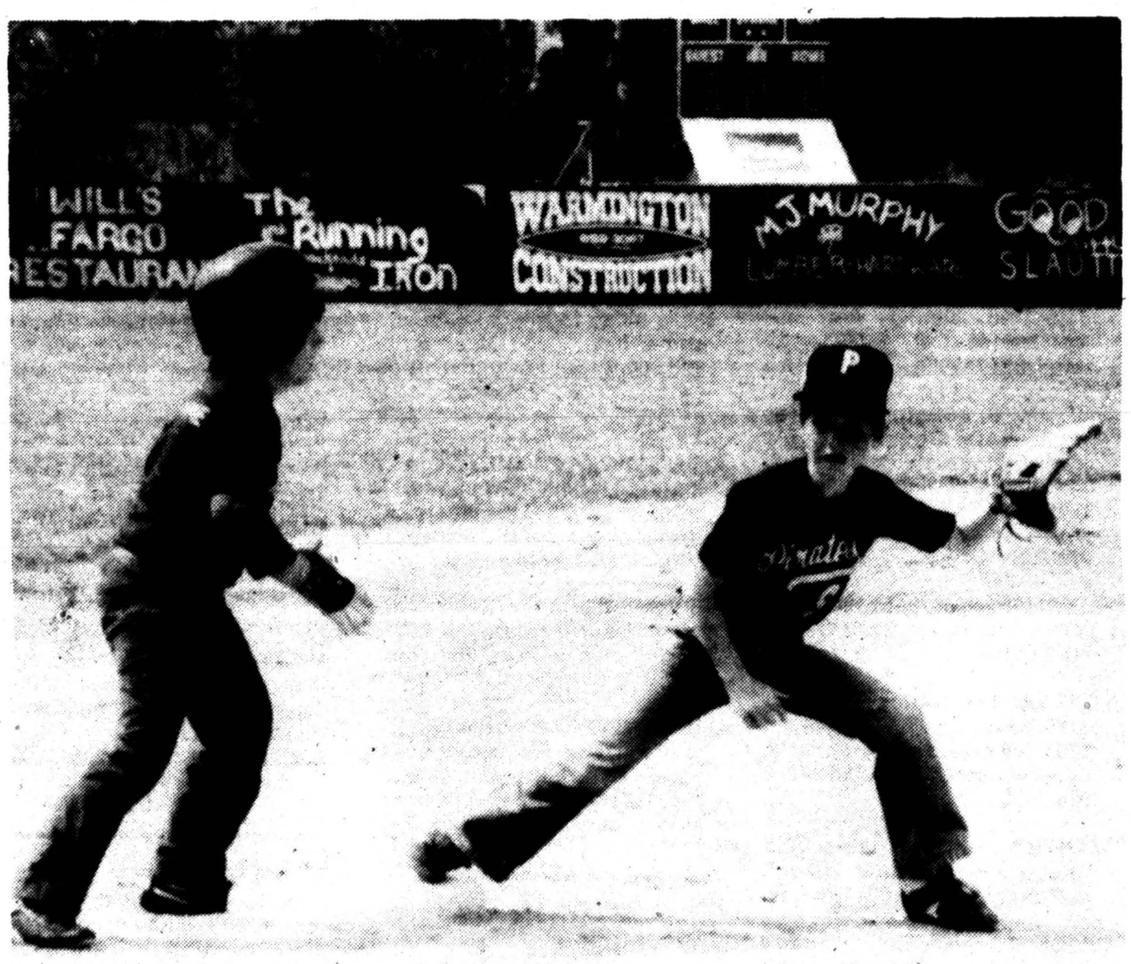
BASEBALL CAN be a monotonous pastime, but it is also a graceful sport.



MATT DEMONSTRATES how minor league players keep their heads in the game — and disrupt the batter's concentration — with "chatter."

MATT LEARNED that one of baseball's hazards includes the tumble that inevitably occurs when third basemen practice their pitching motion too wildly.



AH! BUSINESS at last. Matt keeps an eye on Preston Bishop as Preston is about to scamper home after he hit a triple that was mishandled by other Pirates.

Concert marks Hidden Valley's 20th anniversary number of masters classes offered at Hidden Valley — "Only three or four perhaps, not more than that," he said.

Meckel is optimistic about the Masters Festival of Chamber Music and believes it will become a major chamber festival known throughout the world. "I look forward to the opera season in 1984 and the alternate years after that," he said.

There is also hope that Hidden Valley will grow more solid financially and will be able to increase the endowment program.

"There will be a slight development of the staff — I hope to add a couple in the next two or three years. In the meantime, I think we have the finest group of people working here but they are really overburdened," he explained.

Meckel said the organization is making a transition from being reactive to active. "We now have the strength to take the time it takes to make plans and put them into being. While we were small we were so busy putting out fires we didn't have any time to make plans and when there are no plans there is no power," he explained.

Meckel believes Hidden Valley has lived long enough to see some results of its efforts.

"Kids who were here 15 years ago are now in the business of music; some of the dancers are now with major companies and many of our opera singers are in the most important opera houses in the U.S. and abroad — the orchestra program in the summer has produced players who are now in major orchestras," Meckel said proudly.

"We've had teachers such as Julius Baker and Elizabeth Schwarzkopf who have refined their teaching style through the years and have become so professional and skilled that what they offer becomes richer and richer for the students," Meckel added.

Hidden Valley, according to Meckel, has developed an administrative staff with experience and knowledge which will guide the organization in a positive way. "The board of trustees are perfectly marvelous people who really care about Hidden Valley and want to make sure that we grow," he said.

•

In 1972, Hidden Valley moved to its permanent location in Carmel Valley — a rustic, 10-acre site that was previously the home of the White Oaks Theatre.

At that time people were not familiar with what it offered and were "very skittish" according to Meckel, to come to their public performances.

"Last year's opera season was totally sold out and I hope that's indicative of the strength we have acquired and the respect we have received from the public and I sure do hope it will continue to grow," he emphatically exclaimed.

Such public performances include the Masters Festival of Chamber Music Artists, scheduled for July 6-10, which features a duo recital by flutists Julius Baker and Jean-Pierre Rampal. Also returning as accompanists and solo performers will be pianists Lisa Emenheiser and Jonathan Feldman. There will be seven concerts, three repeated, during the five-day festival. There will be a salmon barbecue at 5 p.m., Sunday, July 10, for interested audience members who wish to meet the Festival artists socially.

The Master Class Series, which begins June 17-19, includes the first master class at Hidden Valley by Sir Geraint Evans, the Welsh baritone of world-renown fame. There will also be a variety of classes for various orchestral instruments, taught by members of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra.

Leonard Davis, associate principal violist, will conduct his master class from June 26-July 1. Lorne Munroe, principal cellist, will be featured in a solo recital on June 26 and follow with his master class through July 1. Glenn Dicterow, concertmaster of the New York Philharmonic, will be presented in recital on June 27 and conclude his master class on July 2.

All three artists will be joined by Harold Dicterow, principal second violin with the Los Angeles Philharmonic and together, they will coach sessions on chamber music.

Julius Baker will return for his 13th master class at Hidden Valley from July 12-16 with a recital on July 15. Joseph Robinson, principal oboist and Philip Myers, principal french horn with the New York Philharmonic, will conduct master classes. Robinson's solo recital will be July 16 and Myers' recital will be Aug. 29.

Many changes have been made since Hidden Valley began in Southern California in 1963 as a summer training program that included, along with intensive music study, classes in horseback riding, hiking and swimming. It was, in effect, a "summer camp" program and one that was especially sensitive to the needs of bright, energetic high school aged students.

The programs eventually outgrew the original location and in 1967, Hidden Valley moved all of its programs and center of operations from Southern California to the Monterey Peninsula. For two years the summer programs were conducted on the campus of the Robert Louis Stevenson School in Pebble Beach and for three years, they were conducted on the campus of the York School in Monterey before moving to the permanent location in Carmel Valley in 1972.

Single tickets on sale for Bach Festival

Single tickets for the 46th annual Carmel Bach Festival — July 11 through July 31 — will be made available to Monterey Peninsula residents for one week only, before the general sale to the public.

From 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., Monday, May 2 through Friday, May 6 the festival office, room 11 in the Sunset Center in Carmel, will be open for this special ticket sale.

With the expansion to a full three week festival, more single tickets will be available than in former years. Tickets for the Carmel Mission Basilica concert are sold out. Ticket prices for the concerts at the Sunset theater are $12, $14 and $16. Recital tickets are $4 with the exception of The Art of the Fugue which is $8.

Carmelite to challenge the best at Laguna Seca

The excitement which has been building for months climaxes Saturday, April 30 and Sunday, May 1 with the 20th annual Datsun Monterey Triple Crown at Laguna Seca Raceway, located off Highway 68 between Monterey and Salinas. The famous track is 1.9 miles of asphalt with nine turns.

MICHAEL WIRRICK of Carmel is seated in a formula Ford which he raced at the British School of Motor Racing at Laguna Seca. He will compete in the International Motor Sports Association Champion Spark Plug Challenge race this Sunday as part of the Datsun Monterey Triple Crown scheduled for Saturday, April 30 and Sunday, May 1 at Laguna Seca Raceway.

This International Motor Sports Association Camel GT spectacular is the traditional pro sports car racing opener in Northern California. Laguna Seca remains the only sprint race on the IMSA circuit and this year it will be more exciting than ever. A major change in the track, the widening of turn 9 by some 16 feet, should make Sunday's 100-mile Camel GT main event a thrill a minute.

Other races scheduled include the popular Camel GTU, the Champion Spark Plug Challenge Series for compact sedans and the new Renault Cup West as well as the North American Formula Ford Championship Series.

Competing in the Champion Spark Plug Challenge race will be Carmel resident Michael Wirrick in the Carmel Camera Center/Ricoh Camera Company racing Datsun 200SX on Sunday.

Last year Wirrick made his professional debut in the Champion race held at Laguna Seca and finished mid-field, despite a lack of experience which caused him to spin several times in the course's trecherous turn nine.

When asked about his chances for victory in the upcoming race, Wirrick said, "Well, there are so many outstanding drivers and highly developed cars to compete against, to say that we (racing is very much a team effort according to Wirrick) will drive away from the rest of the field would be a little unrealistic. We hope with each race to learn a little and gain experience."

The APEX Racing Team, as Wirrick calls his operation, is made up of close friends who share an interest in racing. The crew chief, Michael Latine, currently works as crew chief for the British School of Motor Racing, a commercial organization that teaches racing techniques and is based at Laguna Seca Raceway.

With slalom experience, kart racing and formula Ford competition as a foundation, Wirrick competed in two IMSA sanctioned Champion Spark Plug Challenge races in 1982 and finished respectably in both but was held back by limited financing. This year, he is going to race on a tight budget, again in the Champion Spark Plug Challenge, considered one of the less expensive forms of professional competition.

"What our team lacks in financing, we make up for with a professional attitude, determination and high spirits. We hope to continue to compete in the Champion series because IMSA, the organizer, is very good at catering to the needs of both the driver and the sponsor and that makes the future very bright," Wirrick added.

Advance ticket prices are $25 for the two-day VIP ticket, which includes admission both days, paddock pass for both days and seating in the grandstands at the "new" turn 9. Sunday's general admission ticket is $10 and the two-day general admission ticket is $14. To order tickets by phone, call the Laguna Seca Raceway office between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. at 373-1811. Tickets can also be purchased from BASS Ticket Centers or Ticketron outlets.

The weekend schedule will be practice and qualifying on Saturday. Action will get under way at 9 a.m. Qualifying will begin about 12 noon with GT qualifying set for 2 p.m. Sunday's warm-ups will open at 9 a.m. The Camel GTU will begin the main event portion of the show at 11 a.m. The Champion Spark Plug Challenge feature will start at 1 p.m. and the 100-mile GT main event will get the green flag at 2:30 p.m. The Renault Cup West, making its Northern California debut, will start at 4 p.m.
